State will provide funds for local roads, bridges

by Loretta Tappan

Road work signs will be a familiar sight for Hoosiers and travelers on Indiana's crossroads over the next five-years, during the state's road maintenance and construction plan, which includes nearly 10,000 miles of roadway and about 1,300 bridges.

Governor Eric J. Holcomb and Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) Commissioner Joe McGuinness announced Indiana's Next Level Roads initiative and shared construction plans for the first five years of the new 20-year program.

The state is paying for the maintenance using the recently passed road funding plan that includes a 10-cent-per-gallon gas tax in-

Plans for major renovations to the Grant County Complex and Jail, Courthouse, and Detention Center are under review.

Members of both the Grant County Commissioners and the county council shared support for renovations during their regular meetings last week.

Back in May, Sheriff Reggie Nevells expressed to the county council concerns about plumbing, maintenance, and security issues in the jail. The county jail is addressing many of these upgrades for the first time since the building's construction, which happened in phases, the basement up to the third floor built in the 1980s, and fourth through sixth floors added in the 1990s.

After accepting Request for Qualifications from three companies, the county commissioners awarded Ameresco, an Indianapolis-based energy company, with the facilities upgrade contract in July 2016. Ameresco is familiar with the county buildings because they have completed other county projects as far back as 2011, and the company is working with a team of commissioners, the county council members, the sheriff's department team, and maintenance staff.

Ameresco representatives, Mark Heirbrandt, senior account executive, and Brad Driver, lead engineer, presented some of the updates and repair needs on the recent phase three project.

The company can improve the generator, do security upgrades in all levels of the jail, fix the water infiltration issue at the detention and complex, install the interior and exterior LED lighting upgrades, the heating and cooling fan coils, and

Making an impact through HVAC—Shawn Kennedy

Behind the Scenes features personal stories from people who work in important but often unrecognized roles in our community.—Ed.

Shawn Kennedy grew up in Van Buren, graduated from Eastbrook High School, and earned his bachelor’s degree from Indiana University - Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI). He started working for the family business, Kennedy’s, Inc., a heating and air conditioning company, when he was in high school and continued his work during his first two years of college at Indiana University Kokomo, working days and attending night classes. In his third year of college, Kennedy transferred to IUPUI and decided not to work the first semester. By the second half of his junior year, Kennedy was back to work, this time as a purchasing agent at The Habegger Corporation, an HVAC distributor. Kennedy went to school for business to keep his options open in the business arena. “It just so happens that my grandma and grandpa got into heating and air conditioning. I didn’t have any plans in college other than just to further my education and to be professionally apt on how to do business. That is a key foundation, a lot of people who do mechanical work are not business people,” said Kennedy. His grandfather, Henry Kennedy, established Kennedy’s, Inc. in 1975 with his son, Brent Allan Kennedy, after working for the Marceillis for several years. The business first opened in Van Buren in the house that Shawn Kennedy lives in today and his grandparents lived in before him. After a few years, the business was relocated to south Marion in the Valley View Plaza area of S. Western Ave. About 22 years ago, Kennedy’s, Inc. moved to its current location in downtown Marion at 214 E. Second St. Upon Kennedy’s return from university in September, his grandmother, Marcella L. Kennedy, got sick and was admitted to Ball State Memorial Hospital. “My grandfather pretty much, like four days after I got back here, my grandfather stayed down there, and my dad would go down there at nights and stay,” said Kennedy. “It was probably the worst six months of my life, but probably the best learning experience that I could have had through college or working for somebody else.”

Today, Kennedy deals with all the business side of Kennedy’s, in addition to a little more of the technical help. Henry G. Kennedy passed away in September of 2000, and Marcella L. Kennedy died in 2004. His father, 62, lost a battle with cancer on May 2. “My father took care of a lot of the technical stuff and the commercial plumbing bids. He did a lot of the stuff in the back, working on the tools and machines. He liked doing all of that,” Kennedy said. “We have a lot of good guys and girls here. Everyone works well together, and that has made it easier for me not having my father around. That is what makes a good company, investing in the employees and treating employees equally. Make sure your team knows the financial health of the company. Be transparent with them and portray that,” said Kennedy. In his off time, Kennedy and his family enjoy riding trails, bikes, and camping. Kennedy also plays sports with his two sons, Cole and Logan. Kennedy said, Cole does not have an interest in a career at Kennedy’s, but Logan may. Both of his sons worked at the family business during some of the last two summers. Kennedy has served on the Van Buren Youth Sports Board as treasurer for four years. He coaches the Eastbrook Junior High School softball team and also coaches soccer for the middle school and recreational league there. He helps with the Cub Scouts program in Upland. He became a member of the Van Buren United Brethren Church when he was 18 years old. Kennedy and his wife, Angel Kennedy, celebrate 13 years of marriage this year. They met while Kennedy was vacationing in Florida, maintained a long distance relationship for about a year-and-a-half. The couple considered missionary work instead of being in the family business and a friend, Ron Mazellan, reminded Kennedy that the business he runs provides “service to God by showing others who you are to other people and how you treat others. I thought that was pretty insightful, and it was impactful.”

IWU alum riding across America

This summer, Indiana Wesleyan University alumnus (Class of 2014) and son of The News Herald's publisher David Roorbach is biking 4,200 miles across America with his friend Anthony Petrillo. They started in Yorktown, VA, on July 14 and are headed for Oregon. This is a journal of their travels.

Describe the beginnings of this trip.

In late June, I left my job of three years working for the State of Indiana and set off on a cross country bike trip with my friend Anthony. I've known Anthony since I was eight years old. We graduated from high school together. Anthony has a degree in fine arts from Houghton (NY) College and has worked in Utah as a ski instructor and at a bike shop for the past few years.

Why bike across America?

I wanted to see the country and meet and talk to different people, and I've heard that biking is the best way and at the right pace: 40-60 miles a day for 2-3 months. Not too short, not too long. I also wanted to do something a little bit crazy while I have the time, enough money, and the right energy. I didn't want to let 24 pass me by sitting behind a desk. There will be time for that later.

Where will you go as you bike across America?

We're taking the Trans-America Trail, which is a bike trail established in 1976 to celebrate the bicentennial. It runs on bike-specific paths as well as state and county roads through 11 states.

How do you bike across America?

On a philosophical level, one day at a time. I'm still figuring this part out. I have to leave tomorrow's ride and whatever difficulties it may bring for tomorrow. Today is enough.

On a more practical level, I'm riding a 58 cm Fuji Touring bike with two rear panniers, two stuff sacks on the front wheels, along with a sleeping bag and a single person tent. Anthony is riding a 56 cm Specialized Sequoia with two front and rear panniers along with a tent.

I'm trying to pack light, and I've already mailed a box of stuff home. Extra weight becomes very real when you're dragging it up a 3,000 foot mountain, as I've already found out.

As for daily progress, we'll try to put in 40-60 miles a day and take it from there. We can't plan every detail out in advance, so flexibility is a must.

Where will you sleep?

Wherever they'll have us. So far, we've stayed with a number of wonderfully generous people who specifically host bicyclists through an online platform called Warm Showers. Some of these nights included camping at a commune, pitching a tent in a backyard in Richmond, VA, and staying at a lakeside house. We've also stayed at a campground, at a motel, and knocked on a stranger's door and asked if we could pitch a tent for the night. We're down for whatever.

How do you train to bike across America?

I couldn't say. I didn't do any training. My training consisted of carb loading, and more carb loading. (I do not recommend this routine when prepping for a tour, by the way.)

The first week has been my initiation into bike touring, and I knew in advance it was going to be tough. The hills, mountains, and heat of Virginia have kicked my butt for an entire week, but I'm still going.

Before the trip, I hoped that if I could just hang tough for the first two weeks, I'd get my legs under me and start to see results. Sure enough, one pedal in front of the other, and I'm getting there. It's not that complicated. As a homeless man from Richmond shouted at us, "Turn over both o' them wheels, boys!" That's the name of the game.

The difference between the daydream version of a bike trip and the hard work it takes to pedal up the Blue Ridge Parkway (elevation 3200 ft.) with a fully loaded bike on a 90 degree July day, then ride down the mountain exhausted and to find that the only store in town selling cold drinks just happens to be closed that day is monumental. How inconvenient, but that's life.

What's going to happen next?

I guess you'll have to read along and find out. I have no idea, but from staying at a commune, to snagging a photo with Dave Matthews in a Charlottesville bike shop, to meeting so many generous faith-in-humanity-restoring people, the first few days have been incredible. The journey has been worth the work already.

crease, Bureau of Motor Vehicle fees, and collections specifically deposited in the motor vehicle highway account and the local road and bridge matching grant fund, according to iga.in.gov.

Mike Graft, the head of engineering for the City of Marion, said Marion completed an application for the Indiana Department of Transportation's Community Crossings 50/50 matching grant program this year, which could bring an additional $530,000, the amount needed to finish N. Western Ave.

Graft said the City of Marion had a good year. Some of the streets recently repaired include, S. McClure St., S. Branson St. from Fourth Street to 18th Street, and sections of S.

Nebraska St., Washington St., and S. Meridian St.

There are 177 lane miles in the City of Marion, and it costs approximately $180,000 per mile for new pavement from the sidewalk to sidewalk. The City of Marion uses the local highway and street paint manufacturer, Ozark Materials, for striping such as, stop bars, center lane markings, and crosswalks.

Graft said that, while they do not know how much road funding the city will receive next year, they are ready. The City of Marion adheres to the State of Indiana's Asset Management Plan. Every street is evaluated annually and falls into a grade category. The roads are prioritized for road work based on their grade, traffic, and the amount of funding available. Indiana Local Technical Assistance Program (LTAP), a Purdue Engineering Group, then reviews and approves the plan before the city sends submit it to the state.

"We are still going to focus on the major thoroughfares that need attention first. We worked on almost all north and south streets this year," said Marion Mayor Jess Alumbaugh, "We will take a look at Highland Ave., Kem Rd., 16th St., 26th St., and 10th St. Some of those roads may not need work, so if we don't have as many major roads in desperate need, we will look at other smaller roads."

"Our transportation network of roads and bridges plays a major part in Indiana's success story both now and in the future," Governor Holcomb said. "With a fully-funded plan in place for the next 20 years, Hoosiers can rest assured that Indiana will remain the Crossroads of America for generations to come. I thank our lawmakers for their committed leadership to make this possible, and I commend INDOT for working hard to identify key projects so that we could be ready to roll with this five-year plan so quickly."

After signing the road funding bill in May, Holcomb asked INDOT to prepare a list of road maintenance priorities.

"INDOT's process for selecting projects for the Next Level Roads plan is data-driven and based on overall need and the condition of existing roads and bridges," said Scott Manning, Strategic Communications Director for the Indiana Department of Transportation. "Our engineers collect data on all INDOT-maintained pavement across the state annually using laser technology. The data collected is used to grade pavement based on the International Roughness Index, an industry standard scale for pavement condition. All INDOT-maintained bridges are inspected every two years and graded based on the condition of their decks, beams, and piers. All of that data is used to prioritize projects statewide to ensure that investment improves the overall condition of INDOT's roads and bridges."

The Next Level Roads initiative does not include the additional $342 million annually the state is allocating to support Indiana cities, towns, and counties for local road projects by 2024. "This represents an increase of about 40 percent per year compared with the funding levels going to locals before the passage of the long-term road funding plan," said Manning.

Ultimately, the Governor Holcomb's plan will invest more than $30 billion in road and bridge projects across Indiana over the next 20 years.

INDOT will be spending around $5 billion in State road projects from 2018 through 2022, including more than $62 million in Grant County. The state is resurfacing more than 229 lane miles and rehabilitating or replacing 24 bridges.

INDOT is also working with local communities to create similar plans for local roads and bridges and will award funding for local projects through its Community Crossings initiative in the coming months.

Things worth keeping, No. 5: You are the servant

There have been many things over the course of my life that I have learned that are worthy of passing on. On the other hand, there have been experiences that aren't significant enough to put down on paper. We won't go there today. In an unusual time in my life a couple of months ago, I compiled ten things that I felt were worth passing on. Let's review where we are up to now:

1. The Bible
2. Stewardship
3. Your Calling
4. Proper Training

Today, we will look at the number five thing that has helped me in life, "You are the Servant." If we could take a group of six-year-olds and ask them what they would like to be when they grow up, we know the answers: policeman, firefighter, doctor, lawyer, etc. May I ask you the same question, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" I have found my calling, and it is the most rewarding I could ever experience: a servant. I am reminded of the two disciples, James and John, who came to Jesus asking for a seat of prominence when they entered heaven. Somehow they had lost sight of the reason Jesus called them in the first place. They thought they were a little more special than they were. Now don't misunderstand me, these men were the cream of the crop, but their attitudes had a lot to be desired. They were indulging in self-seeking ministry. The world teaches us every man for himself, but Jesus, in Philippians 2, tells us to humble ourselves. These disciples put themselves in a bad position. They began comparing their lives with the others, a term I call "comparative Christianity." God never blesses us when we look at the lives of others and feel we are superior. Every Christian should strive to be Christ-like in every aspect of their lives. Jesus told the disciples that He did not come to be ministered to. He wasn't interested in others waiting on Him. He came to do the will of the Father, and that was to serve the needs of mankind. He went on to talk about the emptiness of greatness. He stressed the contentment we will enjoy in serving others. If there are any valuable life lessons, which there are, we must incorporate them into our lives. Jesus encouraged His followers to be diligent in doing good. It doesn't cost a thing to serve a brother or sister. When doing the smallest act of kindness, do it with all your heart. There is someone who desperately needs what you have to offer. Jesus' life was all about giving (serving), and He gave His all to fulfill the Father's plan. Wouldn't it be wonderful when others spoke your name if they associated it with serving? You can make this happen. All it takes is to stop looking inward and begin looking to the needs of others. There is a great reward for those who forget self for the good of others. Tom the plumbing upgrades. Additionally, projects include a new natural gas-powered generator for the County Complex, new jail cell doors, and command control system, and two elevator updates. During the last remodel in 2010, updates included replacing 21 of the 79 fan coil units. Ameresco proposes replacing the remaining 58 coil units and upgrading controls. If all repairs outlined in the scope of work are completed, Garyne Evans, director of development engineer for Ameresco, told the council the cost of renovation would be $7 - $8 million and take about 18 months to complete. The county can pay for the facilities project by a lease purchase agreement or by a bond issue. A lease purchase would allow the team to move faster on the project, but with a higher interest rate. Any bond issue of more than $2 million could result in a remonstrance if there is a strong resistance from the public, the lesser of 100 people or five percent of registered voters. Evans said they want to minimize the increase of the annual debt on top of the two existing bonds of the projects that have already been completed, phase one and phase two. One of those bonds comes off the books in January 2019. The final proposal is targeted to be ready for the council's August 16 meeting. —reported by Loretta Tappan

Considering DiMaggio's 56-game streak after 76 years

Just a little fun today if you don't mind. Occasionally we're allowed to talk about baseball here and this seems like a good time. It was 76 years a week ago Monday that one of the few—the very few—records in baseball that may stand until the last man is out came to an end.

It was on that day that Joe DiMaggio, "the Yankee Clipper," "Joltin' Joe" of New York Yankee fame, went 0 for 3 in an otherwise routine game against the Cleveland Indians, thus ending a streak which had begun back on May 15 of 1941: 56 consecutive games in which DiMaggio hit safely, got on base without benefit of a walk or an error.

No one else in the history of the game has even come close, before or since. Willie Keeler of the Baltimore Orioles had a 45-game streak, but that was back in 1895. For Cub fans who are running to their record books right now, it was Jerome Walton—remember "J-rome?" Played centerfield for a while—Jerome Walter who ran up a 30-game hitting streak in 1989. Best ever for the Cubs. Pete Rose over in Cincinnati had a 44-game run back in 1978. In the entire history of the game, only 55 players have had a 30-game-or-better streak. Because baseball is a game of inches and minutes, we must bore you here for a couple of minutes with some of the bits and pieces of that 56-game run of DiMaggio's. DiMaggio actually had one hitting streak earlier in 1933 while playing for the San Francisco Seals in the Pacific Coast League, which was the second-longest in the history of the minor leagues. In 1919, Joe Wilhoit, playing for the Wichita Jobbers in the Western League, hit safely in 69 consecutive games. Wilhoit made it to the "Bigs" for a few seasons with the two Boston clubs—Red Sox and Braves, then Pittsburgh and the Giants. He retired to California and died young; he was only 44. DiMaggio hit a blistering .408 during the streak, with 15 home runs and 55 RBIs. He entered May 15 with a .306 batting average and that rose to .375 after the last out on July 17.

During the run he faced four pitchers who were destined for the Hall of Fame: Lefty Grove, Hal Newhouser, Bob Feller and Ted Lyons. On 10 occasions during the run he didn't get a hit until his last at-bat. No pressure there. Did he help the team? Well, the Yankees had 41 wins and 13 losses during the streak. Here's the most telling bit of trivia of all: He faced 54 pitchers during the streak. Fifty four pitchers in 56 games. That—and the absence of any serious contenders since then—tells us more about the changes in pitching than the changes at the plate. Relief pitching—the long reliever, the middle reliever, the closer; every team has them—is probably the explanation. Common sense kicks in here for a minute: When DiMaggio was playing, the starting pitcher was expected to go the distance, to finish what he had begun, unless he got into serious trouble. Thus, by the later innings, DiMaggio was facing hurl-ers with tired arms. Put it this way: Di Magio batted 1,053 times in his career against a starting pitcher for the fourth time in a game. Well, if they're ever going to let us chatter about baseball again here, we better wind this up right now, but for those of you who care not a whit about baseball, yes, it was the very same Joe DiMaggio who was married to Marilyn Monroe back in 1954. Ed Breen, co-host of "Good Morning Grant County" on WBAT radio, has been reporting on life in Indiana for more than 50 years. In 2016 he was inducted into the Indiana Journalism Hall of Fame.

GRANT COUNTY LIFE

PHOTOS FROM THE WEEK—GLEN DEVITT

I took in several performances of the Hoosier Shakes productions of “Romeo & Juliet” and “Much Ado about Nothing.” Rain and heat moved the venues from the YMCA to God’s House (immediately above). Tuesday night was my favorite “Concerts in the Park” performance over in Gas City. Carly Pearce came to town and impressed everyone she met and everyone in the big crowd for her concert. What a sweetheart (top three photos; the central photo is one of her band members). Speaking of home town heros, Zach Randolph returned to Bill Green Arena and was honored for both his top), one of my favorite events of the year. This weekend also brought the TCC Backpack giveaway, “School Rocks” (immediately above, two photos on the right; also, right column, third from top).

We are doing more with the Grant County Economic Growth Council and local charities and trying to become a part of the heart of the community.”

The bakery also accepted non-perishable food items for the Grant County Mission, and on the Friday before the event, Café Valley donated $10,000 to the Grant County Sheriff’s Department to renovate and expand their wellness center.

Plant President Larry Polhill presented a $10,000 check for the Sheriff Department’s Wellness Center on behalf of Café Valley.

“The Sheriff’s office called us up about two months ago, and they asked us for donations. They wanted to build a new gymnasium for the officers,” said Dash. “So, I got Larry Polhill, our plant president, on the phone, and he cut them a check.” Polhill also visited the Marion plant on Friday to meet the Sheriff Reggie Nevels and his team and formally present them with the donation.

White overtakes Hoch for HJP County Amateur title

by Sean Douglas

Different year, same result for Cody White.

White, a former Oak Hill standout, won his third straight Grant County Amateur Men's tournament with a final overall score of 285. White, who started the second weekend of the event two strokes behind Lance Hoch, shot a 73 at Arbor Trace and a 70 at Meshingomesia to win the tournament.

"It was awesome," White said receiving his championship plaque. "It was a lot better coming back from behind. The last two years I've been ahead the whole way, and it felt good to come from behind and get a win."

After two weekends of competitive golf, White was pleased with his performance overall.

"I played really well all day," White said. "I didn't hit the driver well, but I was hitting the low [irons] well enough to where I could still play the course."

With his third win in a row, White has put together the first Grant County Amateur win streak since Andrew Varner won five in a row from 2008-2013.

"It feels really good," White said. "I've worked hard, I've worked on my game, and I've tried to get to a good level. I feel like I'm playing really well right now, and to be up in that upper echelon of players with Andy and all those guys is awesome."

Hoch, who shot an outstanding 63 at Shady Hills on the first day of the tournament, finished in second place with 289, while Varner came in third with a score of 294.

B.J. White, Cody's brother, won the first flight with a score of 310, while Oscar Recometa took home first place in the second flight with a score of 330.

In the Grant County Amateur Women's Tournament, Jayne Barnes won her third title with a score of 341.

Though only four women participated in the tournament and competed against one another, Barnes stated that the camaraderie amongst the group was both positive and uplifting throughout the course of the event.

"It was very nice playing with the girls [throughout the tournament,]" Barnes said. "They are really sweet and we got along really well; that was the fun part."

County volleyball teams prepare for fall season

by Sean Douglas

Eastbrook

The Eastbrook volleyball program has experienced somewhat of a coaching carousel over the last few seasons.

In 2015, Erin Luthy led the team to an 11-15 record in her only season at the helm before leaving to become the head volleyball coach at Taylor University. Katie Jones finished 4-19 in her only year, 2016, before stepping down.

This upcoming season, the Panthers have their third coach in three seasons, Kelly Arnold. Arnold, a recent Taylor University graduate and successful collegiate volleyball player, is looking to turn the Eastbrook program around.

In the early stages, she has been pleased with what she has seen out of her team.

"The record last year was lower than [many had] hoped, but I am encouraged it can only go up from there," Arnold said. "They were pretty young last year. A majority of them were underclassmen, so I am really excited with what we can do with them this year and next year as well."

"I have really been enjoying the open gyms so far. We've been working out since June and they have been working really hard. We had a tournament the first week of open gym, and they played so well, and I was so encouraged by how they performed as a team."

In her final season at Taylor, Arnold played under Luthy, and though they were only together for one season, Arnold's coaching style was highly influenced by Luthy's tutelage.

"She has been such a great example of what a great coach is and what a great program can be under a coach like her," Arnold said. "She's been such a great influence and mentor throughout this program, so I just try to set up that respect aspect first."

"I want to be a mentor to [my girls,] someone they can come to about anything on and off the court. I think that is [crucial,]"

Though the Panthers only finished with four wins last season, there is a lot of talent that remains on the roster. Helaina Walters, who was a tremendous outside hitter last season, returns as the focal point of the offense and as the team captain. Shelly Jones, a quick, hardworking defensive specialist, will start the season as the team's libero. Jocelyn Martinez, a new face in the Eastbrook community, will give the Panthers someone they didn't have last year—a well-established setter.

These players, together with the already rampant improvement, give Arnold plenty of reasons for optimism for this upcoming season.

"They are a tremendously athletic group of girls, and they have good volleyball skills that we can make even better."

Madison-Grant

Robert Holloway has a long tradition of success as the head coach of the Madison-Grant Argylls volleyball team, which included a tremendous 30-4 record last year.

However, even with all the talent and firepower that the Argylls had last season, a devastating injury to one of their key players changed the outcome of the entire season, as Madison-Grant fell in the sectional semifinal to rival Alexandria-Monroe.

"We had Sloane Stewart tear her ACL two-thirds of the way through the season, and that was a big blow to our team," Holloway said. "It was one of those big 'if' questions [for the season.] If she had been available, what would have happened? Now we will never know."

"We played Alexandria three times. We beat them when she was there, and we lost to them in the CIC match, and then, lost to them in five [sets] in the sectional."

Along with that, Holloway believed that if the Argylls advanced past the sectional, they would have had a real shot at the state title that was ultimately won by the Wapahani Raiders.

"From our perspective, we think that if we would have won the sectional, we would have given Wapahani a [tough time,]" Holloway said.

The Argylls lost several skilled players to graduation, including Kanani Price and Kenzie Stitt, both of whom were first team all-state, and Madison Barnhart, who was second team all-state. Along with Katie Ailes and Hannah Alcala, all five players were key contributors to last year's squad.

"When you lose five of your eight people that play all the time, you're losing a lot of experience [as well as] talent," Holloway said.

However, many talented players are returning for the Argylls, including Lexi Crouse, Mia Stewart, and Maddi Evans. Sloane Stewart will also be back on the court this coming year, but she will still need a little more time. Holloway believes she is "65%" of the way back from her injury.

With summer workouts underway, Holloway has the team focusing on two major areas.

"The two main things we have focused on so far [this summer] are leadership and communication. Volleyball is a communication sport because you have six people in a 30 foot by 30 foot area and you have a lot of things you have to do [in that area,]"

"The girls I mentioned earlier who have graduated have done most of the communicating and talking over the last two or three years. The girls who are coming back have never really had to say much. They are not used to communicating or talking out loud very much, so we've had to work on that."

Heading into the season, Holloway has one goal—for his team to play to the best of their ability.

"I have the same goal every year for every team, and that is to be the best we can possibly be. Whether that's 15 wins, 20 wins, or 30 wins, we try to prepare them to be the best they can be. [Along with that,] I want them to enjoy playing and to enjoy the sport of volleyball."

Marion

Two years ago, the Marion Giants volleyball team finished with only three wins. Last year, the Giants ended the season with 11 victories, an eight-win increase from 2015, due in large part to the team finally buying into Coach Dale Gearhart's program.

"I think the biggest reason for improvement last year was hard work and the dedication the girls put into summer workouts, summer activities, and scrimmage," Gearhart said. Now, heading into his third year at the helm, Gearhart has continued to see dramatic improvement throughout the summer.

"We had more scrimmages this [offseason], and we also invited four universities to come do two-day camps [and work] with us on a lot of ball control," Gearhart said. "I think ball control and passing has been the biggest improvement [I've seen this offseason.] That's mostly what we have been working on."

Along with that, most of the Giants' core roster, including Emily Lindsay, Joz'ya Johnson, Rashaya Kyle, and Leilanu Jackson, will return this upcoming season.

"We basically have the same team this year," Gearhart said. "Lindsay is our setter, and she will be a key [part of our offense.] Kyle is a 6'4" middle hitter, and Jackson is another middle hitter who will be a big part of our offense."

Gearhart's goal for the team this year is simple—to keep getting better.

"Continued improvement is always something you want to look at," Gearhart said. "More wins is what we are looking for. In talking about our goals this year, as a team, we are looking at hopefully besting our record from last year."

In her first season at the helm, Hope Coons led the Mississinewa Indians to a 15-18 record and a sectional opening win over Columbia City—a big accomplishment for a first-year head coach with a young, inexperienced team.

Though there were ups and downs, Coons believed her first season was a major success. "It was a really good year that [will hopefully] lay the foundation for this upcoming year," Coons said.

Luckily for the Indians, several key players are returning to the lineup this upcoming season, including Halle Planck and Erica Foy, who were first team all-conference last year. Both players will be relied on heavily for leadership.

played all over the lineup last season, will be setting into the libero role this upcoming year due in large part to her hard work throughout the offseason. "She did a little bit of everything for us last year," Coons said. "She has played club volleyball and has really improved."

Along with the return of these three players, Coons made some changes to off-season training to help the girls grow closer to one another as well as continue to improve on the fundamentals.

The changes have already yielded some positive results.

"We revamped our summer program this year, and I think that has made a big difference for us," Coons said. "Where we are starting out this [offseason is much further] ahead of where we ended last year already."

"Instead of lifting and conditioning with a bunch of other athletes at the high school, we are doing our own lifting and conditioning as well as playing three or four times a week. I've noticed that doing those [activities] together [has helped with] accountability and engagement as well as team bonding and team building. It has really made a difference in all of those areas, and it's been exciting to [watch.]

"They have been together three or four times the whole summer."

Heading into this upcoming season, Coons has high hopes for her squad, and is excited to lead them down a winning path.

"I think we have the potential to finish much better than we did last year," Coons said. "I think some of the things that held us back last year were [mostly] mental obstacles, finishing well, and competing in a tough environment. Those are things that all our girls [now have experience in.]"

"We have a really, really good crew this year. I feel honored to coach them and spend my days with them."

Oak Hill

In her first year as head coach of the Oak Hill Golden Eagles, Diane White inherited a team that, while talented, was full of youth and inexperience. It showed throughout the season, as the Golden Eagles finished with an 8-21 record, but White didn't care about the wins and losses. Rather, she spent the season working on the basics.

"We concentrated the entire season on fundamental skills and getting the girls where they needed to be," White said. "We were learning a new system, I was a new coach, and they were new players. We had to learn everything from scratch."

Now, with a full season under their belts, White believes the team will perform much better this upcoming season. "I think they've got it now," White said. "We are ready to kick it off for this year. We are ready to go."

"They know each better, they know each other's tendencies, and [they know] how they play. It's really good to have players play year after year together. They always seem to do a little bit better [year after year because] of the chemistry they have. I am definitely looking forward to seeing that."

Marion honors Randolph; names part of 26th Street in his honor

by Loretta Tappan

A crowd of fans, friends, and family gathered at Marion High School last Friday to join the City of Marion and Marion Community Schools in honoring Marion native and former Giant standout Zach Randolph last Friday.

Lori Elzroth, 1989 graduate of Marion High School and president of the MHS Alumni Association, said, Randolph and his wife, Faune Drake Randolph, “represent what the Alumni Association is about and that is giving back to Marion High School, Marion Community Schools, and the City of Marion at-large.”

“Not just a Giant on the court. Not just a Giant in Memphis. Not just a Giant in Marion, but a Giant in our world, Zach does so much to help everyone around him, and he does it with such grace and dignity that we just really appreciate calling him a hometown hero,” said Keith Burke, principal at Marion High School.

In addition to officially recognizing the area of Carey St. adjacent to the Marion High School property as Zach Randolph Lane, several awards were given to Randolph during the ceremony, including: a key to the City of Marion, presented by Mayor Jess Alumbaugh; a certificate of excellence from the State of Indiana, given by Indiana State Senator Greg Taylor; and the Marion Minority Champion Award, presented by Larry Richardson, Robin Founce, and Reverend Larry Batchelor.

“We are here to honor a young man who not only made us proud back in the year 2000, but has made us proud for 16 more wonderful years in the National Basketball Association,” said Jim Brunner, the voice of sports in Grant County for 47 years.

Moe Smedley, Randolph’s high school basketball coach, recalled the time eighth grader Zach Randolph introduced himself to Coach Smedley: “What stuck with me the rest of my life is what he said: ‘I’m Zach Randolph. I’ll be a freshman, and I want to play in the NBA.’ True story.

“Not just a Giant on the court. Not just a Giant in Memphis. Not just a Giant in Marion, but a Giant in our world,”—Keith Burke, principal at Marion High School.

You know how many kids told me they wanted to play in the NBA in their career? A lot of them. For him and what he has done with his career got me in awe. I am so proud of him.”

The ceremony included a hip-hop performance by The Crew, a hip-hop dance group under the leadership of Kirsten Hiller, who is also a Marion graduate, an instructor at the Marion Community School of the Arts, and a former Pacers cheerleader.

Following the presentation in the gym, the crowd moved outside for the unveiling of the honorary place-marker for Zach Randolph Lane, along Carey St. from 26th St. to Valley Ave.

The NCC without the Wigwam?

From: July 14, 1995

By Ken Hill

Can you imagine the North Central Conference without the Anderson Indians?

Why, it’s almost incredible just to think about it.

But that is the direction we are headed after the Anderson Community Schools’ school board voted to close the doors of Anderson High School beginning in 1997-1998.

The three Anderson high schools will be blended into two called Anderson North, now Anderson Highland, and Anderson South, now Anderson Madison Heights.

The school board voted two weeks ago to close Anderson High School in hopes of cutting costs and boosting high school curriculums to include, among other things, more technological education.

So, they plan to spend $38 million to renovate Madison Heights and Highland into Anderson South and Anderson North.

The die-hards aren’t giving up just yet, though. There will be a new school board election before the official change is to take place and it’s hoped something can be done with some new faces in control.

Some people likely will be running for school board election on the platform of keeping Anderson High School alive.

Anderson High School was one of 10 charter members of the North Central Conference in 1926.

Now, after all these years they have decided to close the doors of the school.

The NCC, for sure, wouldn’t be the same without the Anderson Indians, especially in basketball

Randolph’s numbers put him in rarified air

It hadn’t happened in close to a decade, but it happened during Zach Randolph Day last Friday at the Bill Green Athletic Arena.

For the first time in nearly 10 years, the only two living coaches who have led Marion to a state championship were in the same building at the same time.

Morris “Moe” Smedley, who led the Giants to the 2000 state championship, and James Blackmon, Sr., who led Marion to the 2016 state championship, were both attending Zbo’s big day.

They shared some old war stories, but it didn’t match the fun James and I had talking to Zach’s agent, who also was at the big building on 26th St.

We told him about the afternoon in 1983 when James broke the state finals scoring mark by dropping 52 points on Anderson. Then James added that he scored the 52 before the advent of the three-point rule, so, really, it would be closer to 64 or so today.

It got me looking up some other interesting numbers.

Marion has now had a boys basketball team for 112 seasons.

In those years they have won 1,671 games, or an incredible 15 wins per season.

Marion has had 20 coaches during that time.

The winningest coach: Larry Liddle, with a mark of 84%.

The losingiest coach: Myrle Rife, with a mark of 29%.

The coach with the longest tenure: the one and only Bill Green, who served three terms as the man on 26th St and coached a total of 16 seasons, winning five state titles.

Only six Giant coaches have won 100 games.

- Green, with 316.
- Woody Weir, with 163.
- Jack Colescott, with 122.
- Moe Smedley, with 120.
- Orville Hooker, with 116.
- And Larry Liddle, with 113.

While I’m on the subject of stats and Zach Randolph, there have been over 1,000 Indiana boy All Star basketball players since the series began 80 years ago.

Only two have scored more NBA points than Zbo.

You may have heard of them: The Big O (Oscar Robertson) and Larry Bird.

Jim Brunner

Zach, everything you got last Friday on your big day in Marion was well deserved. Being number three behind those two guys puts you in rarified air.

where the Marion Giants and all the other conference members have had so many storied struggles with the Indians.

It's always been a treat, even in defeat, to enter the fabled Wigwam and see all the pre-game pageantry, great crowds and some real basketball thrillers.

The Wigwam will remain although Anderson High School won't. Anderson North and Anderson South would use the Wigwam but that doesn't seem right. The Wigwam is the home of the Anderson Indians and should be for no one else.

A lot of old-timers in Anderson are up in arms over the decision made by the school board of Anderson Community Schools. As long as there's the slightest chance they aren't giving up hope that something can be done to keep the Anderson High School tradition going. The blood of the Indians' runs deep in many, many people in Anderson.

Meanwhile, committees are being formed to select mascot names and team colors for Anderson North and Anderson South high schools. District boundaries are being redrawn as well.

It doesn't seem as if either Anderson North or Anderson South would become a member of the North Central Conference. One hardly would be accepted over the other.

The Anderson Indians will never die even if the school doors are closed forever. There's that loyalty and that feeling of being a part of the Anderson Indians much like the Marion Giants.

Marion and Anderson have had some classic basketball wars over the years in the Wigwam, Marion's Memorial Coliseum, and the Bill Green Arena. There's usually no love lost between the two schools, especially when it comes to basketball. But it would be a very sad night indeed when the Indians and Giants play their last game against each other on the hardwood.
