County celebrates the Fourth

by Loretta Tappan

Between backyard cookouts, concerts, food trucks in parks, and four firework displays, residents had many ways to celebrate the Fourth of July in Grant County. All firework shows were free of charge and lasted approximately 45 minutes.

Van Buren hosted the first professional firework show, in the Fire Barn parking lot, First and Hill streets, on Saturday, July 1, this year, sponsored by the American Legion and Van Buren Volunteer Fire Department. The Van Buren Festival of Lights started with a prime rib dinner on Saturday at the American Legion and concluded with a concert featuring the "The Sunday Drive Band" back at the American Legion.

The second fireworks show took place in Grant County at the Fairmount Playacres Park, 300 E. Madison St., on Monday, July 3. Spectators for the Fairmount fireworks, sponsored by the Fairmount Volunteer Fire Department, were welcomed with a disc jockey booth, food trucks, and various vendors in the park before the firework display.

Tabby Scott, of Gas City, said she enjoys the Fairmount fireworks every year with her family. "We had good seats this year. The fireworks were right over our heads," said Scott. Her family is also able to enjoy the Gas City firework display without having

Marsh store to remain open, retain employees, change name

by Loretta Tappan

Marion's Marsh Supermarket at 1013 N. Forest Ave., recently acquired by Generative Growth II, will become a Fresh Encounter store, allowing north Marion to keep its grocery outlet. The Marion store will remain open through the branding update, which will occur over the next several weeks, and will retain all of its 65 employees.

Fresh Encounter is an affiliate of Generative Growth II, a company based in Findlay, Ohio. Eric Anderson, principal of AR Marketing for Fresh Encounter, said the new owners visited all of the Marsh stores before the acquisition to gauge conditions and employee service levels. The Fresh Encounter human resources staff will work with the Marion team, but members of that team were told not to speak with the media about the transition.

Julie Needler Anderson and Michael Needler, Jr., siblings, represent the third generation of grocery business owners. Their grandfather, Carroll Cheek, founded the CWC Companies in 1964. Then their parents Michael Needler, Sr. and the late Susan Needler bought

Kathi Kiley, Clerk of the City of Marion and its Council and Court

Behind the Scenes features personal stories from people who work in important but often unrecognized roles in our community.—Ed.

The City of Marion’s clerk’s office keeps records of the Marion City Council and Marion City Court. When ordinances and resolutions are passed, minutes approved, court dockets prepared, and court records updated, the clerk’s office acts as the guardians of those files.

Head guardian or city clerk, Kathleen Cassidy Kiley, born and raised in Marion, is a 1977 graduate of Marion High School.

After high school, Kiley started work at Merle Norman Cosmetics Studio, which is still her favorite place for cosmetics. The manager, Mary Jane Holloway, ran for city clerk and took office in 1980. Kiley became her first deputy and worked with Holloway for nine years before spending two years as a stay-at-home mom.

Kiley missed her work, and when Holloway decided to run for City Council, Kiley took the opportunity to run for city clerk. She was elected in 1992.

Through several changes in administration and council, Kiley said the job is the same. “Once the election is over, it’s over. We have a job to do,” said Kiley. “We have our work over here, and they have their work. I respect what they do, and they respect what I do.”

The clerk’s office consists of a staff of three: Clerk Kathi Kiley, First Deputy Clerk Debbie Goodman, and Second Deputy Clerk Vicky

Burns. Goodman serves as council deputy, and Burns as the court deputy. Kiley prepares all of the financial reports, including the end of the month court reports and statistical reports.

“We work very well together, the three of us,” said Kiley.

Goodman and Kiley have worked together since Kiley started work in the clerk’s office. “My kids refer to her as Aunt Deb. She has attended their weddings,” said Kiley.

When Kiley first took office, she discovered the old books used for keeping handwritten minutes for every council meeting from the 1800s to the 1980s, before they recorded and typed the minutes.

“The spines of the books were deteriorating,” said Kiley. “After discussing it with staff at the Marion Public Library, I went to the records commission and asked for permission to transfer the books to the library, where they would be protected and still accessible to the public.”

The request was approved. Files are stored for at least 10 years in the clerk’s vault and filing cabinets.

The Clerk’s office is open Monday through Friday, 8 am to 4 pm, for any citizen to access public records. They also make copies for City Council members before and after meetings.

A typical week in the Clerk’s office includes a lot of paperwork and a consistent schedule. Every Monday and Thursday is spent in court. Every Wednesday and Friday is time needed to gear up for court. The City of Marion Common Council meets on the first and third Tuesday, monthly, at 7 pm.

The clerk’s office works with City Court Judge Jason McVicker. The prosecutor’s office brings new files for the Clerk’s office to enter. They prepare the files for court and then take them apart and file them after court.

During the first quarter of this year, there were 300 misdemeanors, 372 infractions, and 49 ordinance violations, totaling 732 new cases filed. In the same three-month period there were 8,984 previously pending cases.

Kiley said the office is working towards going paperless. They have a scanner for scanning prosecutor’s appearance forms, arrest reports, and affidavits.

Kiley’s favorite part of the job is entering the cases and sitting in the courtroom. She does not care much for filing but understands it is necessary.

“Not every day is a perfect day but each day is only 24 hours long,” said Kiley.

When not tending to council meetings, trials in the city court, or office work, Kiley enjoys spending time with her husband, Robert Kiley, and their family, reading murder mysteries and listening to the Beatles.

“My husband and I are big readers. We go to the library and get our books. He lays on his side of the couch, and I lay on mine,” said Kiley. “Sometimes I like suspenseful books, but I only read those in the living room. I will read a different book in the bedroom because I can’t read a scary book and then go to sleep.”

She has three children, Courtney Martin, Allison Combs, and Patrick Kiley; one grandson, William Martin; and a golden retriever, Finn.

Her favorite hobby right now is buying things for her grandson. Kiley said they have a trip planned to the zoo next week.

Kiley also started the St. Patrick’s Day Queen tradition at Folkie’s Tavern in 2000 as the original Queen. All hail Queen Kiley!

CWC Companies and started Fresh Encounter, Inc., in 1995, which operates stores under the banners of Great Scot, Community Markets, King Saver, Remke, Chief and Sack 'n Save.

The combined companies will now operate 59 stores in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana and employ over 3,600 people, according to a Fresh Encounter press release. "Grocery is hard work, but Michael and Julie have witnessed the rewards of the time and energy it takes to manage supermarkets. You could say it's in their DNA," said Anderson.

Continuing the family tradition, the Needlers purchased 11 Marsh stores in Indiana: in New Palestine, Marion, two in Indianapolis, and in Columbus, Hartford City, Elwood, Tipton, Pendleton, Richmond and Greensburg. They also have four Ohio stores: in Troy, Van Wert, Middleton, and Eaton.

Anderson said the Marsh locations they acquired resemble stores already owned and managed by Fresh Encounter. "They are in tight-knit communities, with the same sense of hometown pride," he said. "The Needlers look forward to bringing the Marsh stores back to a standard that fully represents what family ownership means. Sourcing from local vendors and farmers, maintaining safe and clean stores, and working hard in every department to offer competitive prices and extraordinary service is the foundation of the business."

Marsh filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in May after closing 19 stores. In addition to the Generative Growth II acquisition, Topvalco/Kroger acquired 11 Marsh stores, leaving 18 un-acquired stores, which will tentatively close in early July, according to a Nexxus Group Business Alert.

More things that make a difference: calling

Recently, I sat down and began to write down the things that were most important to me. The number one item on my list was the Bible, God's Holy Word. Second on the list was my stewardship to the Lord and His work. I have been guilty too many times of getting so caught up in the work of the Lord, that I lose sight of the Lord of the work. Maybe you have fallen victim to that same thing.

As I have pondered my list, I believe the number three item would be my calling. The day that I became a Christian, September 14, 1975, was the single greatest day of my life. It has never been the same. What God did for me that Sunday morning, He wants to do for everyone. "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, but is long-suffering toward us, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (II Peter 3:9). God's gift of eternal life is one that we can all receive freely. It does not come to us according to our goodness. It is what Christ has done that brings salvation.

When we become a Christian, there is a great transformation that takes place. Scripture tells us, "Therefore, if any man be in Christ, he is a new creation, old things are passed away, behold, everything becomes new" (II Corinthians 5:17). Salvation brings transformation, but that is just the beginning. There is a process that God begins in each of our lives that takes us from where we are, and brings us to the place He wants us to be. We all have a calling or a purpose to fulfill. No one has ever become a Christian without any true meaning or purpose in life. Now, don't misunderstand me, there are lots of Christians who do nothing for the kingdom, but that has never been God's plan. There is a definite job or mission for each one of us. The joy of this process is to find your calling, and to get busy fulfilling it.

JUST A THOUGHT

For me, the calling was one of teaching and then becoming a pastor/teacher. I have never experienced the peace, joy, satisfaction, and fulfillment like I have doing what God called me to do. I love teaching the Bible. One of the most exciting aspects of teaching is breaking the Word of God down to where we live today. The Bible can identify with every generation, but it is up to the teacher/preacher to make it relevant. It needs to come alive in our hearts. When this process takes place, lives are changed.

I am sure you are thinking about now, "God never called me to preach"—oh, but He did! You may not stand behind a pulpit, but God has put a message in your heart, and it is your responsibility to get that message out to others. St. Francis of Assisi once said, "Preach the Gospel at all times. When necessary, use words." The greatest calling God has ever given us is our witness to others. You have opportunities that I would never have because your circle of friends believe in you.

We all need to realize that with the title "Christian" comes a calling to energize our witness. Whatever it is that God has blessed you with, get busy putting it into practice. There is someone, somewhere, that no one will ever be able to reach like you can, but here is the question, "Will you do it?"

ebations” started on Saturday, July 1. Campers, food truck vendors, and flea market booths set up over the weekend. A Pink Floyd tribute band, Pink Droyd, performed on Monday, July 3, and 38 Special played on Tuesday, July 4; both in the bandshell at Gas City’s “Beamer Linn” Park. Tuesday’s activities included fire truck rides with the Gas City Volunteer Fire Department, the Fourth of July parade, and the firework display immediately following the concert. Zach Skeens, of Marion, said he looks forward to attending the Gas City Fourth of July Parade with his dad every year. “Also, Pink Droyd was just as amazing this year as they were last year. The show lasted almost three hours, so I think everyone got to hear what they wanted. They did an amazing job covering Great Gig in the Sky. That is not an easy song to cover,” said Skeens.

The City of Marion hosted its firework display on Tuesday, July 4, this year as well. The Family Fourth event, held in the traditional locations downtown along the Mississinewa River, lit ground fireworks from the Grant County Family YMCA parking lot on Sutter Way and released the aerial fireworks from Ballard Field along State Road 18. Additional Fourth of July activities were enjoyed at the Marion Splash House, 2601 S. Adams St. as well as in the common area along First and Adams Streets.

Even with all of the amazing firework shows and activities in Grant County, the theme is friends and family. Ryan Lett, of Marion, enjoys his family’s tradition to hold a family reunion every Fourth of July. Angie Martz, of Gas City, said she just enjoys getting together with friends. This year that will be in the Gas City park.

Housing Authority looks to renovate former Marion Hotel

by Loretta Tappan

The Marion Housing Authority (MHA) has acquired the former hotel building located at 501 E. Fourth St. in downtown Marion with the intent to repurpose the building, but as what is not yet clear.

The MHA has cleaned out the building completely down to the structure itself, and is researching innovative ways to transform the 120-room building into market-rate housing and a community resource, approximately scheduled to open in late 2018.

“It’s very exciting to have folks like the housing authority aiming to address needs in downtown. I appreciate their intentionality of asking stakeholders what the needs are and their efforts to listen before development,” said Kayla Johnson, executive director of Main Street Marion.

MHA acquired the property in the fall of last year with the intent to use tax credits to develop the property into mixed-income residential units and some commercial space. Steve Sapp, the CEO of MHA, said that as the tax credit market changed in the last year, plans for the five-story structure have needed to be adjusted.

The public housing agency is now looking at New Market Tax Credit (NMTC) Programs, which allocates tax credit authority to Community Development Entities (CDEs) through a competitive application process, according to CDFIFund.gov.

Funding from NMTC will give MHA more flexibility and the option to target the property as market rate property.

“I just think it is great Marion Housing Authority is going to change the look of that building and area, and provide additional housing for people,” said Mayor Jess Alumbaugh. “We know based on what the Realtors of Central Indiana are telling us that we are in desperate need of new building housing—apartments, condos, and homes.”

Sapp said they are still looking at commercial partners for the first floor while conducting research on the needs and wants of the community. “Potentially, some fresh market grocery and child care. Those are two things that our research has shown to be a need in our community,” said Sapp, adding that a restaurant or bistro is an additional possibility.

The Marion Housing Authority has acquired the Hotel Marion and has cleaned it out in preparation for renovation. Plans for what to make of the building have not been set yet.

“One of the greatest needs I see for downtown is the need for fresh produce. We are technically a food desert in downtown and the housing authority is listening to that need and looking for solutions in their development,” said Johnson.

As far as what the structure will look like, Sapp said he could not say. Right now, MHA is trying to determine the most economical and creative way to proceed with the project. They are working with demolition experts to compare costs of razing the building opposed to working within the limits of the existing structure. “As it stands now, it would still take a lot of internal demolition,” said Sapp.

The building was built in the 1980s for the Sheraton Hotel. In 2002, the hotel changed to Hotel Marion and underwent several renovations before closing in 2015. Before that, the property was initially used for Marion Machine and Tool Foundry in the early 1900s.

No better time, I suppose, than this week, the week of our Independence Day, to bring a picture, a very old photograph, to the table and beg your indulgence while we consider it for a minute or two.

A hundred years since it was taken, or maybe 99. It was taken in Georgia, in 1917 or 1918, with one of those panoramic cameras that were all the rage then. You could line up 200 or 300 people in neat rows and the panoramic camera would scan across the group and get everyone in focus. It took a few seconds for the camera to swing across the scene, so it was a sort of game at the time to have someone at the end of the row who would scamper around behind and get in the picture again at the other end of the row.

The negative and the prints were of outrageous sizes, only a few inches high and up to a yard long. You know: Every member of the local Rotary club, or church group or all the lawyers in town. Sort of a group version of a selfie on steroids.

In this case, it happens to be everyone in the 17th Company, Central Machine Gunners Officers Training School at Augusta, GA. It was at Camp Hancock, an Army base that sprang from the Georgia heat and clay to train men for the great adventure that was to come, that we remember a century later as the horror of World War I—The Great War, the war to end all wars.

These young men—there are 111 of them in the photograph—were the ones who were being taught the art of killing. In their particular case, they would be hatched as second lieutenants, U.S. Army, to command others on the fields of France and Belgium, in the use of that most efficient killing tool, the machine gun, to mow down hundreds, thousands, of oncoming enemy crossing the fields of the Somme or the Argonne forest.

They didn’t know that yet, not these young men—most seem to be in their early 20s; none more than 30. They knew little of the world beyond American shores; indeed, we had never sent men to fight and die in Europe before.

They are a stern lot, all 111 of them. There isn’t a smile in any of the three rows—one seated on the ground, a second on benches and a third standing in the back. Behind them, a row of Georgia pine trees.

All are wearing what were called overseas hats, the broad-brimmed hats that the Indiana State Troopers wear today. Their uniforms are, presumably, olive drab; the picture, of course, is black-and-white, so we must assume. The uniforms are neither crisp nor neatly pressed. They seem soggy, like those worn by men who have been out in the Georgia heat for a very long time. Some are wearing boots, others what were called puttees, leggings of leather or canvas extending from the ankle to just below the knee.

All in the photograph are Caucasian males. Not a Hispanic, or Asian, certainly not an African-American in the class. It would take another world war to integrate our military.

The photographer that day had come from the Dixie Photo Company and I suppose he made his living by selling prints.

One who bought that day was the sullen young man sitting cross-legged on the ground, the 15th from the right in the front row. He’s wearing the hat at a slightly jaunty angle, the puttees are canvas, and his shirt, for whatever reason, seems a lighter tan than those around him.

He is staring, focused with eyes like lasers, at the camera. The mouth is closed, the lips are pursed. There is no hint, none, of what is going on behind the face. It has a dark complexion, what the Irish—and he is one of them—what the Irish call “dark Irish,” men for whom life will usually be painful, if not tragic.

This man, the 15th from the right in the front row at Camp Hancock, Georgia, was 28 years old that summer that we went into The Great War. I know that because this photograph hung on the wall outside my parents’ bedroom for 60 years.

I know that because the man who is 15th from the right in the front row was my father.

Hill-Side Views Damond Bickel – A Texas Star

A former Marion youngster is enjoying outstanding cross country and track success in Texas.

Damond Bickel, who finished his eighth grade year at Jones Middle School in Marion, has been a star runner for L.V. Berkner High School in Richardson, Texas.

Bickel was invited to compete in the Orlando (FL) Sentinel Golden South Classic in Orlando, Florida last Saturday.

He also has been selected by the International Sports Exchange to be on a hand-picked team made up of the best track athletes in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. This team will compete in a Sports Festival in Seoul, Korea, leaving June 7 and returning June 16.

The group also will travel to Hong Kong and Hawaii.

Bickel finished second in the 1500 meters in 4:04.15 at the Texas Relays in Austin April 9.

The district was held April 14-15 and Bickel qualified in two events for the regional. He was second in the 3200 in 9:42 and won the 1600 in 4:25.

Bickel skipped the 3200 at the regional to concentrate on the 1600. He took third in the 1600 finals with a personal best time of 4:21. That was the seventh fastest time in the state for the 1600.

Bickel hold Berkner High School records in both the 1600 (4:21) and the 1500

(4:04).

Bickel is the son of Rod and Rosalyn Smith, formerly of Marion, and grandson of Thelma Webb of Jonesboro and Paul and Patty Smith of Marion.

The Berkner High School Scholastic-Athlete Award was presented to Bickel for both cross country and track.

He received a similar award at Jones in Marion in 1984.

Bickel was named to the All-District and to the All-Regional teams of the 12 Class 5A schools in Texas. He is also one of two distance runners named to the 12 Class 5A All-Stars as picked by the Dallas Morning News.

He will graduate Sunday (June 5) in the top 20 percent of his senior class.

Bickel has signed a letter of intent to run cross country and track for the University of Texas Arlington.
