Arts Center to occupy elementary building

by Sean Douglas
Back at the end of June, Bill Smith, founder of the Duck Creek Center of the Arts, announced that the old Duck Creek-Boone Elementary School, located on State Route 37 between Elwood and Marion, would be converted into a community art center.
Over the next three years, the old school building will be gutted, cleaned, and refurbished into a top-notch facility.

State Treasurer Mitchell visits Carey Services

State Treasurer Kelly Mitchell, at right, talks with Jim Allbaugh, president and CEO of Carey Services about the INvestABLE program on a visit to Carey last week.

On Friday morning, State Treasurer Kelly Mitchell, came to Carey Services to celebrate the first anniversary of INvestABLE Indiana, a program dedicated to helping individuals with disabilities save money while keeping their benefits intact.

"INvestABLE Indiana is a great avenue to allow individuals with disabilities in Grant County to have savings, while protecting their benefits that they need to thrive and assure their needs are met over the long haul," said Jim Allbaugh, Carey Services' president and CEO, "We are very thankful Treasurer Mitchell joined us today at Carey Services, and we hope this event will yield multiple ABL accounts being set up in Grant County."

After touring the facility and speaking with Carey Services' officials, Mitchell spoke briefly about the program, all of its potential benefits, as well as the progress that has been made to date.

INvestABLE Indiana offers seven different investment options, including a checking account with a debit card. People who use the program can save up to $15,000 a year, and individuals receiving social security can earn up to $100,000 without the risk of losing their monthly benefits. Furthermore, any money that people save is tax-free, and can be used at any time for qualified expenses.

To meet the requirements for an ABL account, potential account owners must have the onset of disability or blindness before the age of 26 and qualify for Social Security. The program, which was approved by the state of Indiana back in 2016, has seen tremendous growth, with more than $510,000 in assets under management.

After getting a glimpse of what Carey Services provides for their clients, Mitchell was pleased with what she saw. "Everyone wants to reach their potential and live life to the fullest," Mitchell said after the session. "Carey Services and entities like them help people do just that."

While INvestABLE Indiana has made positive strides in its first year, Mitchell and the rest of her team will continue to look for ways to build on and improve the program in the years to come. "We are asking people who use the accounts to give us feedback," Mitchell concluded. "This being a new program--not just Indiana-wide but nationwide--we are looking to the users to tell us how we can make it better. As it becomes better known, it will grow even faster. Hopefully, it will start becoming something that people automatically know about. That's what we are aiming for."

Those looking for more information about the INvestABLE Indiana program can go to www.in.savewithable.com.

Taylor students win two Emmys, a way to score more

The Roundup is sponsored by Afena Federal Credit Union; see their ad. below

THE ROUNDUP Doug Roorbach

TIP OF THE HAT...to two sets of students from Taylor University, who recently won two awards from the National Association of Television Arts and Sciences, Lower Great Lakes Chapter--the Midwest regional Emmy Awards organization. Winning in the "Student, Long Form" category was the Taylor film The Illustrator about Indianapolis artist Adam Parsons, directed by Camden Johnson, produced by Tiless Turnquest and edited by Sean Quillen.

The second winner was in the "Arts and Entertainment/Cultural Affairs" category, for a film that followed people who dress up as costumed Star Wars characters. Taylor senior Hannah Goebel was the project's producer.

Both films were created in Taylor Professor Kathy Bruner's documentary filmmaking class. These two wins bring the total of Taylor recognitions from the Emmy organizations to six since 2012.

THE WORLD CUP FINAL...was worth watching--end-to-end action, goals scored on beautiful shots, a real bonehead mistake by the goalkeeper that led to a goal--in short, a lot of action.

One of the best things about watching the game is that there were six goals scored, and, let's be real, it's a lot more fun to watch soccer when the teams are scoring, or at least trying to.

A friend that I was watching the game with said, "I hope that France doesn't get a 2-0 lead and then put up the bunker defense and slow the game to a crawl."

Soccer isn't much fun to watch when that happens, even for aficionados.

Back in 1997, soccer made a rule prohibiting goalkeepers from using their hands when their own teammates passed the ball back to them (and more recently prohibited it on throw-ins, too). The game had been reduced to defensive time-wasting, and no one wanted to watch it anymore.

Back in the 1930s-50s, the average number of goals scored in the World Cup tournament was above three a game. Then defensive soccer became the vogue and it hasn't climbed over three since. The average was 2.64 for World Cup 2018.

The pass-back rule was supposed to up goal scoring, but it didn't, so I have a modest proposal that will:

Limit the goalkeeper's use of his or her hands to the six-yard box. (That's the smaller box inside the penalty area.)

This proposal has two very significant things to recommend it:

First, it doesn't require any changes to the field or equipment, so leagues can experiment with it right away. Many other proposals (such as making the goals or the field larger) would require extra cost and be much more difficult to implement.

Second, it doesn't significantly change the way goals are scored or the game is played. No other rule changes need to be made, so officials don't need to change the way they call games.

Coaches won't need to develop new strategies, either.

The only one who will

Indiana Wesleyan University will be hosting 2,300 junior high and high school students this week at the Momentum Youth Conference on the local campus. This large conference is good--both in what it accomplishes in the lives of the participants and in its significant economic impact to our local economy. We hope they have a good week as they study, worship, learn, and play.

to China to perform and to be a part of a cultural exchange program. This is a good thing and the experience for these students will make them more aware of the world in which we live. I have participated in a group that visited China and it was a great experience for me. Thank you to the CSA leaders and sponsors who have made this possible. I hope you have a good trip!

The local daily paper reported last week that the Texas Roadhouse restaurant will open in early September. This is ahead of the originally announced time of February 2019 and a revision of the November opening announced by the Mayor. Whenever it happens, most of us think a nice steakhouse opening in Marion will be a good thing. From my perspective, the sooner the better, and please make mine medium rare! Now that's really good.

The Grant County Boys and Girls Club announced that Jeff Hahn is the new director of the local club. We wish him well and applaud all the good things that the Boy and Girls Club does. This organization is sustained almost totally on the gifts from local friends and businesses. Maybe the announcing of a new director is a good time for you to send them a gift. That sounds like a good idea!

need to change is the goalkeeper, who will be forced to make more decisions on when to come out and play the ball.

Restricting the use of the keepers' hands will allow more offensive play to develop and lead to more goals, and that's the whole idea.

You're welcome.

Anger: A real emotion that we need to keep in check

If I wanted to take the time today, I could begin to tell you about all my problems. We all have problems. Have you ever stopped to think about all of your problems? Sometimes I try to rise above all of my issues and think on positive things, which we all should do. Problems can beat us down, rob us of our joy, and ruin our lives if we let them go that far. Life is too valuable to waste it dwelling on the bad; however, there are times we must all come clean and confess our issues.

One of the most persistent and disturbing problems the Christian faces is anger. It seems as though it has a way of frustrating us, even going to the extent that it ruins our testimony. It affects every part of our life. Anger can rear its ugly head in many forms. It usually starts with a minor irritation, and it can grow all the way up to rage and uncontrollable temper. It is brought about by an uneasiness from deep within.

Have you ever stopped to ask the question, "What is anger?" If we have to deal with it, and we do, we should know something about why we do what we do. Anger is an emotional reaction of hostility that brings personal displeasure. This displeasure is inflicted on us or someone else. Over the course of my life, I have had the privilege of working with many different types of people, and they all had the ability to display their anger in a variety of ways. Some would cuss a blue streak of words that we dare not think of sharing today. I have seen others throw their tools across the room, while there have been a few that use their fists to beat on something or someone. There are also those who do a "slow burn," with a beet-red face containing it.

Ephesians 4:26, 27 gives us a great insight into this delicate subject, "Be ye angry, and sin not; let not the sun go down upon your wrath; neither give place to the devil." These are powerful words that can bring us much help with our problem of anger. They can also bring comfort and control if we only heed what they say. Why would the Scripture tell us to "be angry," but not to sin? Anger is a God-given emotion that we have. When Jesus entered the Temple, He saw the money changers robbing the people. We are told that Jesus was angry. Because of what they were doing, He overturned their tables and ran them right out of the Temple. Do you think Jesus lost His composure or His control? Absolutely not! Jesus was sinless, yet He displayed His anger because that was what was needed at the time. Anger is a real emotion.

Don't misunderstand me, none of us are Jesus, and we don't claim to be. God has given us this emotion and because He has given it, He must have believed that it was important to our character. We must be able to keep it in check and not let it control us. I have hardly scratched the surface on this subject, therefore, I want to continue with these thoughts next week. I hope it is helpful to you, as it is to me. Even though I thought I could write the entire article in one issue, I can't so I have to be honest; this angers me! Ha!

While places like Marion, Anderson, Muncie, Tip-ton, and others all have art centers, the Elwood-Summitville-Fairmount areas are lacking in that department. Elwood has a dance studio, but there is a void in the theater and visual art communities.

Smith, who performs regularly with the Attic Theatre in Elwood, heard that many parents in the area do not sign their kids up for art classes or music lessons because of the inconvenience of a long commute.

After some brainstorming, he put his plan into action.

The original idea was to build a brand new building, but Smith's friend Eric Turner offered to donate the Duck Creek-Boone Elementary School to the Duck Creek Center of the Arts if he was willing to fix it up.

"There certainly is a lot of work that needs to be done," Smith said. "Basically, we are dealing with a shell of a building. All of the wiring and all of the plumbing needs to be totally redone, but at least we have a shell and we have land. Through the generosity of the Turner family, we are able to have a head start."

Together with the help of several organizations and law enforcement agencies, Smith plotted out the best course of action.

"The local authorities—the Summitville Fire Department, the Madison County Sheriff, and the Madison County Planning Commission—have all been just really great to work with in terms of making sure that we know what we need to do," Smith said. "In the end, we accepted the generous offer, along with a grant, to help begin the process of cleaning it out and tearing it out."

Phase one of the project is underway, as Smith and his associates are working to clean up the site. Phase two, which will be gutting the building, will occur next year. The project will conclude in 2020 with the space's remodeling.

If everything goes according to plan, Smith hopes that the facility will be ready to open its doors in October 2020.

Once completed, the center will provide a plethora of programs. There will be a room dedicated to the home arts, like sewing, quilting, and pottery, as well as one for painting and sculpting. Patrons will also have the opportunity to take vocal and instrumental lessons, learn different styles of dance, and engage in theater workshops. The old gymnasium will be converted to a theater, while the cafeteria will be reborn as a café and kitchen.

Teachers and instructors are already lined up, and people of all ages are welcome to participate in any event of their choosing.

While the final product is still a ways away, Smith is optimistic about the project's future.

"Ultimately, what we hope to see when this is up and running is, number one, people of all ages honing their creative skills through instruction, and, number two, that we provide state-of-the-art, high quality, family friendly entertainment through our productions, not only through plays and theater, but also through live music performances, concerts, and events which aren't readily available in that area."

CASA.

es, and even Marion High School engaged in a fun and friendly competition. More importantly, this event helped shine a light on an organization that works tirelessly to help the youth of Grant County.

CASA is a volunteer-based agency that works with children who have been removed from their homes due to abuse and or neglect by their parents and caregivers. CASA's duty is to be their voice by providing information to the court regarding each of their wants and needs.

The idea for the event came in April 2009, and just three months later. "We built this from the ground up, literally," Leslie Hendricks, executive director of CASA of Grant County, said. "Our first year, we had one literal sandbox. It had edges and it filled up with sand, and I believe we had 10 spaces. Now, we have a total of 27 spaces...I think one of the draws is that...the parameters are so wide that you can be as creative as you want to be. I think the combination of its location, the event itself, and the mission of CASA just keeps people interested."

Some of the projects included a lizard, a turtle, a sand cake, and even a pirate ship.

The amount of money raised has grown as well. In July 2009, CASA netted just over $3,000. This year, CASA made close to $20,000. Overall, the event has netted $160,000 for CASA over 10 years, giving the organization the funding it needs to provide the best service for the children of Grant County.

"The money is important, but it is secondary," Hendricks said. "Our primary focus is to help the community understand who we are and what we are doing, and that these kids matter. We are serving 231 kids right now, and those are Grant County youth, children, and babies that need this service. Without us, those voices don't get heard."

"It's about word of mouth," Hendricks concluded. "It's certainly the effort of my board, my staff, and my volunteers communicating to the people in their circles about us and about this event."

"Today was about celebrating. Today was about honoring Grant County's support of our mission and honoring the families that we serve. This is the one day of the year where everyone can come and say 'Yes, I support CASA through my time, my talent, and my effort here.' It's just an interesting and unique event."

GRANT COUNTY LIFE

PHOTOS FROM THE WEEK—GLEN DEVITT

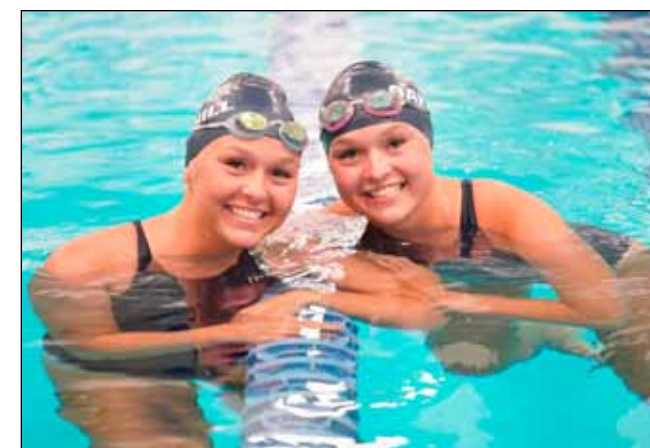

Last weekend I had the privilege of shooting a beautiful wedding with friends at Matter Park (left, top). The bandshell and the community center were beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony, entertainment, and food were perfect. What a great day.

I made a few visits over to the Howard County Fair in Greentown (left, center). One of my annual favorites.

I had a photoshoot over at Oak Hill with a couple of my favorite swimmers (Below, top and center) and I also had a pop-up photo shoot in downtown Marion with a couple of members of the Eastbrook track team (below, bottom).

I closed out the week with Cook & Belle over at Greentown (left, bottom) along with a performance by the "Flying Toasters" going on at the same time.

A modest suggestion for local governments

A decade now, coming up on 11 years, since two very bright and well-intentioned Hoosiers took it upon themselves to drag their homeland kicking and screaming from the 19th century at least into the 20th, if not the 21st century. They failed, of course, what with we Hoosiers being attached as we are to tradition and to the absolute certainty that nothing better can be made of what we have.

We were pretty much okay with the railroad, and the automobile seems to have worked out fairly well, in spite of having to pay taxes to build more infernal roads and highways. But we have, by god, got our government, the finest we could come up with a couple of hundred years ago and we are most unlikely to let anyone monkey with it.

Our two prophets were Joe Kernan and Randy Shepard. Kernan, a, very nice guy from South Bend with an affection for baseball was—still is—a Democrat who was lieutenant governor and ascended to the governorship on the death of Frank O'Bannon. Shepard, Randall T. Shepard, an Evansville Republican, had been Chief Justice of the Indiana Supreme Court for a dozen years and was—still is—considered to be among the best and the brightest.

It was Mitch Daniels, then in the governor's office, who brought them together and challenged them to come up with a plan to bring Indiana government out of the Dark Ages and at least into a sort of rural Midwestern Renaissance.

They did their part, contending in the cover letter of a now-dusty-and-moldering 46-page "Kernan-Shepard Report" that "we maintain literally thousands of local governments and we pay for more than 10,000 office-holders. All of this is more expensive than it needs to be."

"The time for a leaner, more effective government is at hand," the two concluded, but "it will only come to pass if the people of Indiana insist on it."

A decade has passed and it hasn't, and we haven't.

Twenty-seven specific recommendations, proposals—call them what you will—were tacked to door of the state capital: For starters, get rid of the clumsy and antiquated county commissioner trio in each of the 92 counties and install a single, elected county executive.

A cranky old lawyer friend of mine used to explain the commissioner system this way: They found the 276 dumbest people in Indiana, set them aside and then parceled them out, three to a county to be commissioners. Allow for sarcasm, but you get the idea.

Why, exactly, do we need an elected and salaried trustee and a board of advisors for said trustee in each of the 1,008 townships scattered from Lake Michigan to the Ohio River? Get rid of them and the buggies they rode in on, suggested Gov. Kernan and Judge Shepard.

While you're at it, why not require that the county assessor—the person who sets the value on your property for tax purposes—why not require that that person be a professional, know something about property values, rather than simply electing either a Republican or Democrat who is retired or unemployed and just looking for a job for four years?

Good plan, sensible plan, might have staved off some of the mess we're dealing with in county government all over the state right now.

But there was a fatal flaw—two fatal flaws, actually—despite the best thinking of Daniels, Kernan and Shepard.

First, to make it work, the state legislature would have to pass a bucketful of enabling laws. Didn't happen. Probably won't happen.

Second, the architects forgot that each of those 1,008 township trustees has a wife or husband or kids or relatives or friends who vote. No, they said, it is not yet time to kill the golden calf.

A MOMENT

Ed Breen

Just a modest suggestion here: Why doesn't some outrageously courageous state legislator step up and take one for the team, and simply tell the folks down there that it is time to fix the mess?

Hoch takes two-stroke lead after two rounds of Amateur Varner in second as tournament heads to Elks', Arbor Trace next weekend

by Sean Douglas

After Lance Hoch saw his final score posted, the former Eastbrook standout could not help but smile.

Last year, despite starting the tournament with a 61 at Shady Hills and heading into the final weekend with a legitimate chance to win it all, Hoch's dream of an amateur championship came crashing down around him at the Meshingomesia Country Club in Marion, where an uncharacteristic bad hole--the 18th, to be exact--cost him dearly.

This year, however, Hoch put his demons to rest at the county's toughest golf course, shooting a 71, one under par, to finish the first weekend of the Grant County Amateur Golf Tournament in first place.

Hoch also shot a 71 at Walnut Creek on Saturday, finishing with a two-round score of 142.

On a course that he has struggled on in the past, Hoch took a different approach, which yielded positive results.

"I just tried to come into this year calmer," Hoch said. "Pressure caused me to shoot a 77 in the second round last year, but this year I'm coasting and not trying to worry about what I'm shooting. I wanted to do way better than I did here [at Meshingomesia] last year, and I feel like I did. I hit a lot of good shots. I haven't played here a lot and I usually haven't played well here, so I'm glad this round is over with."

Overall, Hoch was pleased with his play over the first two rounds of the tournament, but he knows that he cannot be complacent if he wants to win his first amateur title.

"I feel like I'm hitting well off the tee," Hoch said. "But I need to focus more on my short game. There are still 36 holes left and a long ways to go, so I'm not trying to get ahead of myself."

Andrew Varner, one of the most prolific golfers in the tournament's rich history, finished two strokes behind Hoch with a two-round score of 144. He shot a 70 at Walnut Creek on Friday before finishing with a 74 at Meshingomesia on Saturday.

"I got off to a good start on Friday, and was hoping to bounce back today with another good one. I didn't play too well, but I didn't play too bad," Varner said. "There's 36 holes left and I'm not out of it by any means."

If anyone is capable of pulling off a comeback, it's Varner. In 2009, a come-from-behind victory began a five-year run, cementing his legacy as one of the tournament's best. His six overall titles are the third-most in county history.

Despite his success, Varner knows he is going to have to step his game up next weekend if he wants to win number seven.

"I'm just going to try to hit some good shots," Varner said. "I really didn't do anything good or bad this weekend. I played pretty solid, but next weekend I'm going to have to play better to try to win."

In the women's tournament, Jenna Boucher holds a five-stroke lead over seven-time champ Julie Flores. Boucher shot an 81 at Walnut Creek and an 84 at Meshingomesia to finish with 165. On a day where many golfers finished with high scores due to the heat and the course's difficulty, Boucher kept her composure, giving herself a nice cushion heading into next weekend.

"I just played hole by hole," Boucher said. "I tried not to get mad. I only triple-bogeyed once, so I think that is what kept my score low."

The tournament will resume on July 21 at the Elks Country Club before wrapping up at Arbor Trace Golf Course on July 22.

New drivers impress at Gas City I-69 Speedway

Several racers came away with impressive victories at the Gas City I-69 Speedway on Friday. In the Midseason Showdown, Shane Cockrum of Benton, IL, became the seventh different non-wing sprint car winner this season.

The "Flying Fireman" started second and led the entire race despite fierce competition from the likes of Evan Mosley of Lapel, Ted Hines of New Castle, and Braydan Willmington of New South Wales, Australia.

Mosley, who started fifth, finished in second place, while Hines placed third. Willmington, coming off his impressive victory last week in Gas City, took home fourth place honors in just his second weekend racing a non-wing sprint car. Cole Ketcham of Muncie rounded out the top five.

In the Thunder Car Rumble, Jimmy Watters of Montpelier overcame significant car damage to overtake pole sitter James Headley and secure the victory. Headley led for 17 of the race's 20 laps, but was hit and rolled to a stop, allowing Watters to take a lead he would not relinquish. D.J. Holt finished in second place, while Ron Flaugh was the third-place finisher.

In the quarter-mile dirt oval, Zeke McKenzie of Claypool won his third UMP modified feature of the season. Despite starting fourth, McKenzie quickly passed pole sitter Bradley Jameson on lap three and won handily. Garrett Jameson placed second while Bub Roberts finished in third.

Lastly, in the 15-lap FWD of Columbia City, started on the pole and never trailed. Gage Allen took home second place while Eric Solms placed third.

The next event at Gas City I-69 Speedway, the Back to School Bash, takes place on Friday, August 3.

‘Drive for show, putt for dough’ leaves JB broke

A familiar sight last week: Brunner putting.

One of the perks of writing this article each week is days like today. Yesterday I played one of the most amazing rounds of tournament golf ever.

I’m 69, so I’ve played in a few tourneys since my early days 60 years ago up in Ft. Wayne, battling Billy Kratzert and the Schumaker boys. Never, I repeat, never, have I had a round like the Sunday performance I put on in the second day of the Grant County Amateur.

At the Meshingomesia Country Club, in 18 holes of golf, I was on the green in regulation (or at least the fringe) on 16 holes. Twice I made a par four, once a par three, and three times a par five.

Never have I hit the ball from tee to green that well.

On 16 out of 18 holes I was putting for birdie. Guess how many I made? Zero. That’s right, zero.

Guess how many times I two-putted for par? Five. I turned a 75 into an 88.

Throw in two three-putts on the holes I hit in one over regulation and I three-putted 13 holes. Jim Gallagher, Sr. thinks that is a Grant County record.

So, time to hang it up? Throw the putter in the Mississinewa River?

No way. I’m leading the second flight and have a shot at my—are you ready for this?—fifth County Amateur flight championship.

Maybe the golf gods were looking out for me.

Now, anyone want to give JB some putting lessons before Saturday?
