Concerts celebrate Independence Day

The Mississineva Valley Band, under the direction of conductor John Brane, accompanied vocal soloist Noelle Lehman, Marion, as she sang the Star Spangled Banner at the conclusion of the band's annual summer patriotic concert in the Ford Theater at the Honeywell Center in Wabash Thursday evening. The concert by the Marion-based band also included a program by the newly formed Mississinewa Valley Choir.

On the evening of July 3, the towns of Gas City and Marion both put on concert events to celebrate Independence Day.

Marion held its festivities at Matter Park, providing entertainment for the young and old alike. While parents and grandparents settled in for a night of live musical entertainment, the children of Marion happily populated the playground and bouncy house while awaiting the fireworks show.

Musical guests at Matter Park included The Posse, Jesse Brown, and international recording artist Jon McLaughlin, who was born and grew up in nearby Anderson. McLaughlin stole the show, as his pure, soulful voice, combined with his brilliant skills as a pianist, captivated the audience.

"Music always brings people together," one woman said. "No matter what your ideas are, music always makes people happy and allows them to have a good time."

McLaughlin has played all over the world, but nothing that compares to playing his home state, he said. "It's always the best," McLaughlin said, "Not only because I get to see my family, but

Stifling heat blankets area, threatens health and safety

by Sean Douglas

Over the weekend, a major heat wave swept over Grant County, causing temperatures to rise over 100 with rampant humidity.

While summer is a wonderful time of year full of events, including concerts, festivals, and fairs, prolonged exposure to intense heat can cause some serious health issues. These include heat exhaustion, which occurs when the body loses large amounts of water through sweat, and heat stroke, when the body loses its ability to cool itself.

Stephen Dorsey, who serves as the public information officer for the Marion Police Department, stated that the two best ways to combat the heat are adequate hydration and staying out of the sun.

"If you are going to be out in the sun, my main recommendation is to stay hydrated," Dorsey said. "That's No. 1. [Along with that,] folk needs to stay out of direct sunlight for long periods of time. Direct sunlight with that humidity can certainly cause people problems."

If staying inside, Dorsey also encouraged residents to keep fans and air conditioners running at all times, as well as keeping windows shuttered to block the sun's rays.

Many folks in Marion used the Splash House, the local swimming pool, to escape the heat, but have taken other precautions as well, including having lots of fluids on hand.

"I have been spending the last few days at the ball fields," one man at the Splash House said, "so we have

Stewart takes helm of Earlham College

Avis Stewart, a Marion native, has been named the interim president of Earlham College in Richmond, Indiana.

On June 27, Alan Price, who has led Earlham since July 1, 2017, announced his resignation from the school. He plans to work until July 31 to help with the transition of leadership.

"After careful deliberation, I have decided that this is the best way forward at this time," Price said in a statement. "I would like to express my profound gratitude to the entire community for supporting me and generating an atmosphere of positive collaboration over this last year. Earlham will always hold a special place in my heart."

Stewart will assume the duties of president with Prices' departure, and will remain in that role until a new president is selected.

Until then, Deborah Hull, chair of Earlham's board of trustees, believes that Earlham will be in good hands with Stewart at the helm. "Avis has been a member of the College's administration for many years and is respected by those on campus and off for his ability and dedication to the College," Hull said. "He has served in many roles including as a vice president in areas including, Institutional Advancement, Community Relations, and Athletics."

A nationwide search in consultation with faculty, staff, and student representatives will begin in the upcoming academic year.

Above All Construction cuts ribbon on new location

by Sean Douglas

Above All Construction has a new permanent home. The general contracting company, together with its employees, their families, their friends, and the Marion Chamber of Commerce, celebrated the significant milestone with a ribbon cutting ceremony on Thursday afternoon.

The business is located in the old Pro Prints building on Lincoln Boulevard, nestled between Marion and Gas City just off of State Route 15.

Since the company's humble beginnings in owner Derick Lewis's home back in 2016, they have expanded greatly, serving Marion and the rest of Grant County. They have completed projects in Delaware, Howard, and Hamilton Counties, as well.

Above All Construction is the definition of a local, family business. Derick's father, Mark, works on his crew, while Derick's son helps during the summer months. All eight of their full-time, skilled workers reside in Grant County.

While the business is certainly qualified in multiple areas, including decks, back porches, and even small gutter repairs, their specialty trades are roofing, siding, and window installation.

The company's new property includes a second building that is used as a shop and a warehouse, along with several spacious offices for upper management to conduct daily business and for crew members to prepare for their tasks. There is also a large, open conference room that is used to meet with vendors and potential clients, together with lounge areas and a break room that are for rest and relaxation between jobs.

On the sign outside of their main building, there are three simple words written under the business name that represent the Above All Construction business model—Because You Matter.

It is a simple phrase with a simple meaning—to provide customers with “the peace of mind that everything will be taken care of in a highly professional manner,” as it says on the company's website.

“Good business practice, quality work, and word of mouth are always going to be [crucial] in any kind of advertising,” Office Manager Dawndra Keeley said. “We don't do a lot of extensive advertising, [because] our goal is to have our work speak for itself. So far, we have done really well with that.”

While the business has only been operating for two years, it's never too late to think about the future. As they continue to grow and expand further, Keeley hopes that Above All Construction will become the go-to contracting service for all of Grant County's needs in the years to come.

“We want to be a hometown name and the business that you can go to,” Keeley said. “We do get a lot of calls where people are having troubles with contractors contacting them back for the work or coming out to provide an estimate. We will always get back with somebody, and we always return their calls.”

“Overall, our goal is to be known for our name. If you call us, we will be there.”

What is right with America?

Have you ever stopped to think about all of the good things about America? What's right with America? You may be thinking at this point that this is a strange twist or a new way of thinking. It would be easy to compile all of the gripes and complaints we have, but that would not do anybody any good at all.

I will give you a little view of my heart today about the land I love, the country where I was born. I have no desire to be any other place. As I see it, America is one of the greatest nations in the history of the world, but why?

1. Freedom

Such a simple word, but what a complex process. I have never known anything less than freedom, but freedom always comes with a price. Freedom isn't free. When our founding fathers decided to sign the Declaration of Independence, they were basically signing their death warrants. With only a few exceptions, such as Samuel Adams of Massachusetts, these were men of substantial wealth and property. Why would these men sacrifice all they had for the good of others? The answer is freedom and their love for God and fellow man.

2. Acceptance

America has been blessed by people from every walk of life. Now, at this point, you might be thinking about immigration and racial issues, but for a moment, could we rise above that? I can personally say that I don't see in "color." People are people no matter what shade of the skin. America has French, German, Italian, Hispanic, Chinese, Japanese, American Indian, African, and all the other races of mankind you could mention.

My family immigrated to America from Germany. Our family name was "Mansperg," man of the mountain, but I am not a German. I am an American. My heritage is no more special than any other, but I am an American.

3. Religion

We have a melting pot of folks who believe many diverse religions. We don't have a government-sponsored religion. We have a choice. I choose to be a Christian and I have the freedom to do so because as an American I still have rights to worship. I don't condemn others who believe something different than me. That is their choice. I have never had to sneak off to pray or worship, that is my privilege.

4. Right to Vote

I have voted since I was 18 years old and I appreciate that right. I have helped vote in some people who proved not to be so good over the years, but I helped vote them out also.

My list could go on and on, but my real motive is to get you to realize what is right in America and focus on those thoughts. I can say to you there are things I don't like, but the bottom line is we are blessed. If we would only stop for a few minutes, we could compile a long list of the good we have here.

God has blessed America and I thank Him for every blessing He has bestowed on us. Yes, the most important part of the right in America is the blessing of God. I don't have my priorities wrong because we have what we have by the grace of God. Take a moment, make your own list, put a big smile on your face, and thank God for His goodness!

it's really fun because we get to play at a lot of different places. It's fun to take all that experience and come back home. I want to make my home state proud."

While the music was a big selling point for the event, others viewed it as a way to bring folks, regardless of age or social status, together for a common purpose.

"I think it's the same for any community, no matter what the size is," McLaughlin said. "When a small community has stuff like this, it gives you a sense of pride for your home turf. Obviously, it brings the community together emotionally and socially as well."

"It keeps people interested

[in the park] and keeps people down here," another concert attendee said. "It keeps the community together."

In Gas City, for their fifth concert of the summer, Beaner Linn Park hosted their own special musical guest.

Dennis Quaid—an actor since the late 1980s who has starred in movies such as The Rookie, The Day After Tomorrow, and, most recently, I Can Only Imagine—and his band The Sharks performed songs in both the rock-and-roll and country genres to the delight of several hundred fans.

"[These events] give people the chance to get together, have a good time, and not always think about the bad stuff," another woman said.

Alongside a foot stomping performance by Quaid, the fair-like atmosphere—food trucks, lemonade stands, and Americana souvenirs—elevated the celebratory feel.

Rebecca "Becky" Ann Shroyer 1944-2018

Rebecca "Becky" Ann Shroyer, 74, Sweetser, died on Saturday, June 23 at Summit City Health Care in Fort Wayne. She was born near Jalapa on June 8, 1944, to the late Robert and Joanna (Landis) Gordon. She married James "Jim" L. Shroyer, Jr., who preceded her in death.

The family received visitors from 12-2 pm with Shroyer's funeral service beginning at 2 pm on Thursday, June 28 at Needham-Storey-Wampner Funeral Service, North Chapel, Marion. Pastor David Steinke officiated and burial will take place at a later date at Marion National Cemetery. Online condolences may be made at www.nswcares.com.

Heat,

been using ice buckets of water for our kids, along with keeping them hydrated the whole time."

"[For me,] it's about keeping hydrated," another Splash House patron said. "I work outside, so we just try to cool off when we can, along with drinking lots of water and Gatorade."

Todd Culley, interim director of the Grant County Emergency Maintenance Agency, stated he and his team usually set up cooling shelters in times of extreme heat, but, due to their lack of use during other heat advisories in previous years, Culley decided to forgo them, especially since the advisory only lasted through the weekend.

"A lot of people rely on family and friends nowadays," Culley said. "If [the advisory] was going to be an extended period of time beyond a couple of days, I would have looked towards setting multiple cooling shelters around the county to try to get people in there. Hopefully, people who need those additional resources and services are familiar with the agencies that can assist them."

Culley and the rest of the GCEMA did not just sit back, though. They used social media as a tool to help residents of Grant County to stay safe. "We put information out on our Facebook with tips on how to beat the heat—staying hydrated, checking on family and friends, and making sure that they do not leave kids or pets in an unattended vehicle—tips that help prevent becoming a heat casualty."

The heat looks to be here for the foreseeable future, so residents are urged to continue to use caution.

Some ‘dinner talk’ with Huckabee Sanders

We all got a little education last week when Sara Huckabee Sanders, the president’s press secretary, was refused service at a hoity-toity northern Virginia restaurant. In a word, she was apparently “eighty-sixed.”

In a tweet that went viral in a nanosecond, the director of the environmental group Clean Virginia, posted what appears to be a note left by the restaurant’s staff for the morning manager, reading: “86—Sara Huckabee Sanders.”

That’s where the learning part came for some of us. Now, every job, trade, craft, has its lingo, its slang, its language that carries meaning for the insider, the guys and gals who do the work. More importantly, it has no meaning for the visitor, the outsider.

In newsrooms, where I’ve earned the milk money for the baby for 50 years, for instance, a “beat” had nothing to do with music, but was the daily routine, the offices and people to which a city hall reporter went every day to see what was going on.

“Make the mail” meant the deadline for the paper to go to the pressroom so that it could get to rural subscribers in the mail on time the next morning. You had to “make the mail.” No debate.

Sarah Huckabee Sanders

Or the number “30” had meaning back when we wrote stories on paper on a typewriter. Got to the end of the story and you typed the number “30.” That meant the end. No more to come. In a darker way, that “30” was extended to describe the death of a newspaper colleague: So-and-so hit the old 3-0 mark. The end. He died.

It seems that “86” is the restaurant equivalent of “30.” No more. Gone. Says the culinary dictionary, “86” means: “To remove an item from an order or from the menu because the kitchen or bar is out of that item.”

In the case of the Press

Secretary, being “86” meant she was out, removed from the list of those welcomed in the Virginia restaurant.

For some reason still unexplained, the 80s and 90s numbers contain a lot of significant restaurant jargon. An 81 is a glass of water; 82, two glasses of water. A 95 is a customer walking out without paying. In a bar that’s called “stiffing.” The “86” thing can be applied to a person or product, and it goes back a lot of years.

A Washington Post crime story going back to 1942, titled “Murder With Your Malted,” reported “The tuna-fish salad is ‘86’ meaning there isn’t any more. And if you say a guy is ‘86,’ that means he’s fired or all washed up or something like that. Maybe dead.”

Other words and numbers can be equally graphic. On one list of dining jargon is this: To “cremate it” means that the customer wants something overcooked, as in “Table 5 wants his burger cremated.”

A “dead plate” is a serving that is unservable because of temperature or appearance or because something is missing from the plate. Example: Says the waiter, “My shrimp is dead plate because I don’t got the veg to go with it.”

A “bev nap” is what you and I might call a cocktail napkin. A “deuce” is, logically, a table for two.

Hostesses at regular restaurants, who are usually male and better dressed and called maitre d’ at fancy joints, love to use the term “party” when they look at your group when you arrive and ask for a table.

“... And how many in your party?” they will ask,

A MOMENT
Ed Breen

knowing full well that it is four people standing there.

“Four,” you say, and they ask, “and what name shall I say?”

To which I always respond, even though they very seldom get it: “Donner. Party of four.”

Ed Breen, co-host of “Good Morning Grant County” on WBAT radio, has been reporting on life in Indiana for more than 50 years. In 2016 he was inducted into the Indiana Journalism Hall of Fame.

PHOTOS FROM THE WEEK—GLEN DEVITT

This week included a return visit with Phil Dirt & The Dozers at the Concerts in the Park in Gas City (immediately below). I also stopped by the Marion Splash House for some high speed video practice with the big bucket dump (Left, top). I did a little photo documentation at the Marion Hostess House, a real architectural treasure (Left, center). Shannon Young hosted an open house at the new realtor office “House Hunters.” (Right, bottom two) Had a great time in downtown Marion on Saturday evening attending the Marion Design repurposed clothing fashion show. Well attended and a very interesting subject, the cost of clothing (Below, second from top). Did a little drone flying, checking the progress at Texas Roadhouse (Left, bottom), some downtown Marion projects and the end of the demolition at Hotel Marion which is now completely demolished. Brand new housing downtown to follow.

County teams sharpen games at IWU’s Super Hoops

by Sean Douglas

Over the weekend, 1,100 players and 125 teams from Indiana and other Midwestern states gathered at Indiana Wesleyan University for the annual IWU Super Hoops Basketball Camp, as coaches and players continued to work on improving their skills and growing with one another.

The event made use of venues all over the city; Luckey Arena, Bill Green Arena, and McCulloch Middle School hosted games. Mississinewa High School and RJ Baskett Middle School in Gas City also hosted contests throughout the weekend.

Madison-Grant, Marion, Mississinewa, and Oak Hill all participated in the camp, honing their craft and working to be better at the end of the weekend than they were at the beginning.

While the Madison-Grant Argyls have spent most of the summer finding the combinations that give them the best chance to be successful, they have also spent a lot of time in the weight room bulking up.

“Anytime freshman become sophomores, you are going to be a little stronger,” M-G Head Coach Brian Trout said. “We’ve been in the weight room, and I think we have shown over the summer that we are going to be a lot more physical and a lot stronger than we were last year. Hopefully, we will [continue] to see that progression.”

Along with that, the Argyls have put a lot of effort into their two biggest weaknesses from last season--defense and turnovers--and Trout believes that his young team is coming along in both of those areas. “We’ve really focused defensively, and we’ve focused taking care of the basketball,” Trout continued. “We have seen a lot of progress in both of those areas.”

For James Blackmon and the Marion Giants, the focus has been on team unity.

Marion, nearly three years removed from their last state title, have a lot of talented pieces in place, including Jalen Blackmon, JK Thomas, Dre Aguilar, and others, all of whom have worked throughout the summer to elevate the Giants back to the ranks of the elite.

“I think the guys are taking advantage of the month of June,” Blackmon said. “We’ve been in the gym every day Monday through Friday working on some things that I think are paying off for the guys. We are starting to look more like a team, and the guys are moving the ball and playing with a lot of continuity.”

The Mississinewa Indians had some struggles over the weekend. Several players, including Heisman Skeens, were participating in their first event of the summer, leading to a lack of chemistry with the guys who were a little further ahead in the program.

“We have a couple extra pieces here that haven’t been with us,” Head Coach James Reed said. Everybody is at a different point right now in what we are doing, and so we are having trouble finding the right combination of discipline and making the right decisions right now.”

But even through the bumps in the road, Reed is not worried, still believing that his team can make a lot of noise this upcoming season. “The summer has been great,” Reed said. “We played some teams [during camp] that have more [veteran leadership] than we have right now, which was perfect for what we need. We are so close.”

The defending Class 2A state champion Oak Hill Golden Eagles will look vastly different this coming season. Gone are Caleb Middlesworth, Spencer Ballenger, Tyce Frank, and David Arens, leaving Oak Hill with Konnor Cabe and Tahj Johnson as the only returning veteran players.

A hoop junkie’s delight

If you’re a hoops junkie, it doesn’t get much better than this. All the local basketball crazies were out in full force: Super Fan, Al Culley, Al Rhodes, Basil Mawbee—get my point?

What got them all so excited? The three-day marathon of basketball put on by Indiana Wesleyan University and the folks from Super Hoops.

Last Friday, Saturday and Sunday we saw 125 basketball teams come to Marion to play in a three-day hoops festival. Each team was guaranteed 9 games and a lot of fun.

The action was intense. The crowds were huge. If you missed it, shame on you.

- Here’s what I saw:
- A Marion Giants team that is really scary. Playing with just three (and sometimes two) starters for the 2019 team, Marion went 10-0. Jalen Blackmon and JK Thomas may be the best pair of guards in the state, and they are just a sophomore and a junior, respectively. Get ready to pack the Bill Green Arena.
  - Ole Miss was very athletic and very young. They will just get better and better as the 2019 season rolls on. They are very quick, very athletic and have a lot of players to make this a fun season in Indian country.
  - The Madison-Grant you see this year will be the Madison-Grant you saw letic and very young. They will just get better and better as the 2019 season rolls on. They are very quick, very athletic and have a lot of players to make this a fun season in Indian country.

The Madison-Grant you see this year will be the Madison-Grant you saw last year—and will see again in 2020 and in 2021. The youngest team in the county, they had their moments, and, on a given night, will be able to play well with any of the Central Indiana Conference basketball teams.

• Oak Hill was a sight to behold. Remember, eight seniors just rode off into the sunset with state title rings, but don’t cry for Eagles Coach Kevin Renbarger just yet. His varsity, starting two sophomores, went 5-5, and his j.v. team went 9-1 and won the title. Wait until February to get a real look at the defending state champs.

Congrats to Super Hoops and to IWU for an outstanding three days of basketball. While it was 95 degrees outside, it was an air conditioned 72 degrees inside. If you missed it, you missed the sporting event of the summer in Marion and Grant County.

Schedule the last weekend in June 2019 on your calendar now.

Jim Brunner is the voice of sports in Grant County.

Much of their roster will be full of youth and inexperience, so most of the summer has been dedicated to helping those players learn what it is like to play varsity basketball.

“They need to learn how to compete at the varsity level,” Oak Hill Head Coach Kevin Renbarger said. “That’s what we have struggled with all summer long is consistency of competition. We’ve kind of been on a rollercoaster. Some games we are good at it and some games we are not, so we are looking for five to eight kids who are going to give me consistent effort.” As the transition continues, Renbarger will look to Cabe and Johnson to lead both on and off the floor.

“At every turn of the cycle [as it concerns] graduation, it’s always nice to have kids

Grant County football

On a blistering Thursday afternoon last week, four of the five Grant County football teams took part in a multi- team contact scrimmage at Taylor University, working through the relentless heat.

The teams played each other in 20-minute scrimmages, each spending 10 minutes on offense and 10 minutes on de- fense. After plays, offensive and defensive coaches praised good technique, while critiqu- ing areas that needed work.

For the Eastbrook Panthers, who are coming off a 13-1 season and a crushing loss to Woodlan in the Semistate game, this event was about working to plug holes across the roster.

“We are just trying to get some competition at different positions, especially across our offensive line, seeing who is going to fill those spots” Head Coach Jeff Adamson said.

“We’ve got five open spots from graduation across there, so we have to see who can step in and fill those. At the end of June, you’re maybe about a month away, so you kind of have to start evaluat- ing some guys to see where different people are. That’s the main thing we are looking at.”

With a dynamic rushing at- tack still intact, together with an aggressive defense, the Panthers figure to be one of the top teams in both the coun- ty and the state again this year.

A month out, Adamson likes what he sees.

“There’s a real good chem- istry. The seniors have great leadership, and they are a fun group to be around,” Adamson said. “They are high energy guys, which is good most of the time, and they work hard.”

Craig Chambers, Head Coach of the Marion Giants, liked the event because it gave him a chance to see what his players are really made of.

“We get to see the toughness of the kids,” Chambers said. “We get to see their mindset when it’s hot and things aren’t going their way. It’s a good thing to come out here and compete.”

Now, with a year’s worth of experience, the Argylls are looking to continue their devel- opment, and Booher likes the work that his team has put in.

“We are tweaking offense and defense compared to last couple of years, so it’s going to be a little bit of a learning curve, but we’ve actually im- proved quite a bit from Mon- day to today, and that’s what we want to see—not making the same mistakes, getting bet- ter and learning new things,” Booher said. “They are doing a really good job.”

After 12 wins in the past two seasons, the Giants are looking to take the next step. Keshawn Taylor, with his pure athleticism and accurate arm, should have no problem tak- ing over for Justin “Juice” Johnson at quarterback, while JK Thomas and Khalid Stamps should provide an ef- fective one-two punch at run- ning back.

On defense, Dre Aguilar and Brendon Martin form one of the best defensive end tandems in the NCC, while

THE ROUNDUP—DOING GOOD

Each week, The News Herald prepares news of the good being done by individuals and organizations in Grant County for broadcast on WBAT. Here is an adaptation of the transcript of that broadcast.—Ed.

Cathy Queen, Carey Services’ longtime director of Early Head Start. Queen is retiring, ending a 40-year career with the agency. Carey held a reception early this week to recognize Queen’s contributions and to celebrate her retirement. Congratulations, Cathy, and thanks for all the good you’ve done in the community.

Speaking of Carey Services, they sent us a notice the other day that they have NAP credits to give to donors. If you’re not familiar with NAP credits, let me try to explain them briefly. NAP stands for Neighborhood Assistance Program, and it provides tax credits that not-for-profit organizations can use for specific projects.

Take a minute to think about what that means: Everybody knows that you get a tax deduction when you make a donation to a not-for-profit. You reduce your income by the amount of the donation.

Deductions are good, but tax credits are even better. They’re a payment on your tax bill. So, for example, if you owe $900 for your state income tax bill, and you have a $500 credit, now you only owe $400.

The NAP credits work like that. Here’s an example: you make a $1,000 donation to Carey Services’ NAP-approved project and you get a $500 credit for your state income taxes. Think of it as a way to tell the state how you want some of your tax money spent--and I think that’s a good thing.

Carey Services will use the NAP donations to help with the new Pleasant Square apartment complex that is early in the construction process. Pleasant Square is the agency’s second affordable housing complex, following the construction several years ago of the adjacent Pleasant Woods complex. Both complexes are affordable housing communities designed with individuals with disabilities in mind. Each community has five one-story accessible duplexes designed to facilitate independent living.

Carey isn’t the only non-profit that can offer NAP credits--Grant County United Way has them to offer, and I’m sure there are others as well. Check with your preferred charity and help do some good while you get some good out of it as well.

Now here’s the final good word, from the Good Book, where, in 1 Peter 3:10 it says: “Whoever would love life and see good days must keep their tongue from evil and their lips from deceitful speech.”
