Part 3: Goss follows father's footsteps

In this, the third and final part of her story, Dr. Lori Goss-Reaves makes the trip to Valentine's Ridge, where her father, HM2 Larry Jo Goss, had died during the Vietnam War. Her traveling companions included her husband Eric; her father's battalion doctor, Jerry Behrens; Behrens' wife Mary; and their driver Mr. Hai.—Ed.

by Dr. Lori Goss-Reaves

Friday, December 7: After two days of traveling, we finally arrived at our hotel in Dong Ha. We walked to an outdoor market to purchase incense and flowers, then departed for Valentine's Ridge. On our 25-mile drive, I opened my dad's Bible to a random page. It was Acts 1. I was not sure if I was supposed to read it during the ceremony, but knew it was God's message to me at that moment. About two minutes before we arrived at the ridge I received an e-mail from my son Cody. It contained a letter that began "Hey, Grandpa." My first tears of the day began to fall.

There were many unknowns before us. I had the battle coordinates—XD 986 455, a GPS device from a fellow Gold Star daughter, information from men who fought in the battle on 2-14-68, and the prayers of friends who reminded me that we had all we needed.

As Rt. 9 curved to the left, Jerry spotted the "Little Rockpile."

My dad had been there on a patrol less than a week before he was killed. Eric watched the GPS device closely. After realizing we had passed the coordinates, Mr. Hai turned around. Soon, all I could see out of my window was thick jungle. And then I spotted an electrical pole. One of my dad's corpsman climbed Valentine's Ridge in 2003, and told me an electrical pole had been erected on the top. I asked Jerry if that could be it. Eric suggested we pull over.

I grabbed everything for the ceremony and remembered to breath. The base of the ridge met up with busy Rt. 9. The size of

An appreciation of the Phillippes: supporters of performing arts

by Alan Miller

The Phillippe Performing Arts Center at Indiana Wesleyan University is perhaps the most visible, but certainly not the only, evidence of the rich legacy that Thomas and Joan Phillippe left to the University, and to the City of

The 1,200-seat auditorium, one of the sparkling jewels in the community's cultural crown, opened in the fall of 1996. The Phillippes initially gave IWU $3 million for the building, and later added another $2 million.

Earlier, the couple had assisted with construction of a 32-bed residence hall and had donated their interest in Wesleyan Health Care Center.

"The Phillippes were very instrumental in stepping forward in the late 1980s when Marion College was teetering on the brink of bankruptcy," said Terry Munday, IWU's former vice president for advancement. "I'm not sure if the college would have survived were it not for people such as the Phillippes and others who followed their lead."

Tom Phillippe served as an IWU trustee for more than 30 years, and chaired the board's Advancement Committee for many years.

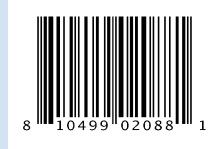

Phillippe died December 22, 2018, at a health-care facility in Texas. He was 89 years old. His wife, the former Joan Cheesman, died March 23, 2017. Both of their

On the other hand, the majority of people would probably say that they really don't like their job and they wish they had another one. I can honestly say that I have never had a job that I didn't like. I have always experienced a measure of satisfaction in whatever the job presented. I have a feeling there is a reason why we do, memorial services were at College Wesleyan Church, and they are buried beside each other at Grant Memorial Park.

The couple met in 1948 during their freshmen year at Marion College. He graduated in 1953 with a degree in religion, and she graduated in 1952 with a degree in elementary education.

In 1964, Tom accepted a new pastorate in Minneapolis, where he met Fred O'Dell, a commercial real estate broker, who was active in The Wesleyan Church. That relationship changed the course of the Phillippes' lives.

"Fred was involved financially in a couple of nursing homes and invited me to invest in them," he said.

Phillippe agreed to invest $25,000 in an older nursing home in McIntosh, MN. By the time O'Dell died in the early 1970s, Phillippe owned seven nursing homes.

Realizing the company needed a management team, Phillippe and his business partners founded Nationwide Management and moved the firm's offices to Marion in 1973. The company relocated to Indianapolis in 1986 and was later sold. "Early in his business career, Tom and Joan committed themselves to support all of the Wesleyan-owned colleges, and he honored that commitment. He was truly a Wesleyan," Munday said. "But I think IWU benefited more than the others because he and Joan were both IWU graduates and Tom served on our board."

Tracing the Hoosier roots of America's King of horror

The News Herald

the last 100 years, sionally. has given us more pleasurable fear, more stark terror, more reasons to fear the night and resort hotels and dogs and even high school proms than Stephen King.

I don't know why we like to be scared out of our wits, but apparently Mr. King knows, just as Alfred Hitchcock knew and the director who designed the shower scene in the Bates Motel

January 23, 2019

Anyway, so far as we know Mr. King is neither weird nor psycho. Watch him in an interview and he seems normal as a high school English teacher. He even plays in a rock band who need some fun occa-

But inside that normal, non-psycho brain of his is a reservoir of stuff he has collected over the years that are terrifying to the rest of us. Remember the maze in "The Shining" or the mouse in "The Green Mile"? Or those angelic little girls repeating the word "redrum..."? King, who just turned 71, has written 59 novels and sold more than 350 million books and somewhere—this is the part you didn't know—somewhere in there, in some person, place or thing are snippets of recollection of northeastern Indiana, more specifically, somewhere along Lake

in Maine and New York and probably anywhere else he wants to live, but if we assume that the inner working of the brain are pretty much formed in early childhood, well, then there is some Hoosier in there, too. Bottom line is this:

Stephen King and his father and his brother all have some roots right here in our neighborhood. Start with the father, Donald Pollock (who later changed his name to King) was born and reared over in Peru.

The boys—Stephen and older brother David—spent about two of their most formative years here in Indiana, nary of houses at 1227 Lake Avenue in Fort Wayne.

Now, we're not telling you anything new here. This is all in the public record and in the biographies that have been written about King. But no one in Indiana, especially the literary and tourism departments, seems to care. Childhood experiences of a lot of other short-term Hoosiers ranging from Charles Manson to the Rev. Jim Jones are well known, but the early life of a man who, in all fairness, is-or George Beahm: is going to be—a giant of popular literature in America is overlooked, dismissed. So here is the story, pieced together from Wikipedia, from Facebook and from room conversations with old-timers in Fort Wayne.

King was born in Portland, ME, in 1947. Parents were Donald Pollock King and Nellie Pilsbury King. When Stephen was about two years old, Dad went out to buy a pack of cigarettes and never came home. Mom, David and Stephen soon moved to Delafield, WI, and then on to Fort Wayne, where they moved in with Dad's sister, Betty. Older brother David picks up the narrative in an interview in a book by

"After Wisconsin, we then went to live with my father's sister Betty, and a lady she lived with named Rudy. We have a picture of that, too— Stevie and I sitting on a lawn in front of a house. Aunt Betty was a schoolteacher.

"After that we lived in an apartment of our own in Fort Wayne. We shared the apartment with a number of cockroaches. It was an apartment house, but I'm not sure if it was a single-family dwelling or if there were a number of apartments in it."

"Looking at city directories, we can locate Betty L. Pollock in 1951, living at 1227 Lake Avenue in Fort Wayne and working as a teacher at the Hamilton School," Beahm writes. "In 1954, she resided at 3529 Lake Avenue, then outside the city limits, and

Then it becomes more vague and within a few months Mom, David and Stephen tire of the Midwest and return to Stratford, CT, where they lived until Stephen was 11 years old. The family then returned to Maine, where Mrs. King cared for her parents until their deaths. The rest, as they say, is history.

So when you pick up a Stephen King story, as surely you will sometime, and think that the source of the terror was long ago and far away, just don't be so sure...

Though I am sure nothing will ever fill the void his loss created, this trip brought me a strong sense of peace.

We stopped at Valentine's Ridge one more time after we left Khe Sanh. This time we read the Bible verse from Acts I and a poem from my mom. Garrett Holder recorded a double-double with 14 points and 10 rebounds, while Bragg finished with 13 in the loss.

Madison-Grant M-G routs Daleville

It was a great Tuesday night for the Madison-Grant Argylls. First, they dominated an incredibly talented Daleville team from start to finish, making that 55-point loss to Frankton over the weekend seem like a distant memory. Secondly, Wyatt Rudy became the 10th player in school history to score 1,000 career points, and finally the Argylls found themselves back in the win column with a 78-49 rout of

"Huge bounce-back win," M-G Head Coach Brian Trout said. "That's what we needed to do."

Rudy recorded a doubledouble with 19 points and 10 rebounds, while Jackson Manwell also scored 19 for at the charity stripe in the the Argylls. Kaden Howell came away with 17 points, while Grant Brown collected 12 points and seven assists in the Argylls' victory.

Games of the week: Eastbrook/Madison-Grant

Before their contest with Eastbrook, the Argylls had won three of their first four games in the New Year, including a thrilling triumph over Blackford and blowout victories over Northfield and Daleville.

On Friday night, the Argylls continued their strong olay on both ends of the floor, using a big first quarter and a balanced scoring effort to come away with a 73-50 win over the Pan-

"I felt like we took control of the game early, and that's what we wanted to do," Madison-Grant Head Coach Brian Trout said.

Madison-Grant's offense continued to hum in the third quarter, leading by as many as 20 points and knocking down eight of their 13 attempts to take a 57-43 lead into the final frame. Eastbrook's offense was efficient as well, shooting six-for-14, but the Argylls always seemed to have a response. The fourth quarter was the Lance Wilson show for Madison-Grant. Another member of the Argylls' talented sophomore class, Wilson could not be contained in the final stanza, scoring secure the 17-point victory. Brown recorded a doubledouble for Madison-Grant, finishing with 20 points and 10 rebounds, to go along with five assists and two steals. Wilson finished with lected 17 points, seven rebounds, and two assists. Madison-Grant finished the game shooting 49 percent (29-of-59) from the field and 37 percent (sevenof-19) from beyond the arc. Defensively, the Argylls recorded eight steals. Issac Cooper led the team with three, while Brown and Dylan Bragg led the Panthers with 19 points, while Schamber came away with 15 points and seven rebounds in the losing effort.

Slow starts have been an issue for the Eastbrook Panthers throughout the 2018-2019 campaign. In many of their losses, those sluggish first quarters, or first halves, proved costly because by the time the Panthers woke 10 points, including six in up, it would be too late to

Against the Madison-Grant Argylls on Friday night, the Panthers once again struggled to find their rhythm, but their defensive play was their saving grace, forcing 37 turnovers, and their offense eventually found their footing in a 44-

17 victory over the Argylls. In the first 16 minutes, the Panthers held the Argylls to just three-of-10 shooting from the floor while forcing 20 turnovers. "That's been something all year," Bradley said. "Anytime someone gets into us first, we react by panic passing and panic dribbling, and we've just got to be calmer under pressure.

The Panthers kept up their defensive domination throughout the rest of the contest, allowing just three field goals and 11 points the rest of the way, while forcing 17 more turnovers.

Standfest played a phenomenal game for Eastbrook, scoring 23 points and connecting on five three-point attempts. Foulk was second with 11 points, while Martinez collected

Gracev Fox continues to show tremendous improvement for the Argylls, scoring six points off the bench, while Morgan Conliff came ants clinched the conference championship with a 48-38 triumph over the Bronchos.

Marion's defense kept the Broncho's offense at bay in the first half, but 11 offensive rebounds helped Lafayette Jefferson stay in the game. The Bronchos led 9-6 after the first quarter and 22-21 at halftime.

Turner finished with 29 points for the Giants, and was a dynamic force all evening long, while RaShaya Kyle scored eight and Markeisha Jackson, five. Defensively, the Giants held the Bronchos to just 14-of-54 shooting from the floor.

Mississinewa

Indians rout Elwood

The Mississinewa Indians notched their third rout in a row on Friday evening, using staunch performances from Alayna Webb and Tyler Bartel, combined with another impressive defensive effort, to come away with a 70-30 triumph over Elwood.

Bartel was five-for-eight from three-point range, while Webb was six-for-10. Mississinewa held Elwood to under 10 points in three of the four quarters, while shooting 47 percent from the floor and 46 percent from behind the line.

Oak Hill

Golden Eagles dominate Alexandria

The Oak Hill Golden Eagles came away with yet another impressive victory dominating the Alexandria Tigers from start to finish in a 76-22 rout. The Golden Eagles came out firing from the start, taking a 26-1 lead after the first quarter before extending it to 55-14 at halftime.

Kaela Robey picked up right where she left off against Northwestern, leading the Golden Eagles with 22 points on 11-for-13 shooting from the field, while also coming away with four rebounds, four assists, and three steals.

Taylor Westgate continued her impressive second half of the season, recording a double-double with 19 points and 10 rebounds, while Adrianna Trexler collected 10 points.

JB declares: Brady is the GOAT

Thas finally happened:
People who just couldn't see the forest for the trees have come forward and said what they wouldn't say for the past 10 years.

After what happened in the National Football League the past two weeks there is no argument. Tom Brady of the New England Patriots is the greatest quarterback of all time.

Now this isn't like the hype that surrounded Michael Jordan when he won six NBA titles and immediately had bestowed upon him the "greatest" label. This has taken two decades for football purists to come to the realization that no one can match "the golden boy."

I think if Brady played for, let's say, San Francisco, like Montana, or the Broncos, like Elway, the moment would have happened easier, especially around here.

But he's on the hated Patriots, who every Colt fan in his or her heart of hearts What's even more insane is that he's the oldest starting quarterback to ever take his team to the Super Bowl and he has no plans of slowing down.

But there he was again on Sunday on the road in Kansas City, first leading his team to a last-second touchdown to get the AFC title game into overtime, and then three times in the overtime hitting a third-and-long pass to get the Pats to the Super Bowl—his ninth trip to the Holy Grail in the NFL.

What's even more insane is that he's the oldest starting quarterback to ever take his team to the Super Bowl and he has no plans of slowing down. With the talent and coaching still available to this franchise, who knows when the end comes?

It was just refreshing today to hear from many Brady haters, that they now must take their hat off and salute the kid the Colts passed over in the NFL draft during five rounds, as the greatest ever.

We mentioned that Brady is off to his ninth Super Bowl. How many NBA, NHL or major league baseball players in the last half century have ever made it to their sport's respective championship?

Brady is one.
Magic is two.
Kareem is three
And LeBron is four.
(Notice in the NBA you only need one name.)
