Duck Race raises cash, support

by Sean Douglas

Carey Services held its annual Duck Race event at the Marion Splash House on a beautiful Saturday morning and afternoon last week, and, for the 13th consecutive summer, it was a rousing success.

Since its inaugural running in 2006, the Carey Services Duck Race has not only helped to raise money for their clients in and around Grant County, but has also helped Carey Services continue to do what they have done since 1954—to make all people, regardless of any incapacity they might have, into “empowered and equally valued members of the community.”

“Carey Services is really about making a positive difference in the lives of the people we serve every day,” President and CEO Jim Allbaugh said. “We are really about turning abilities into opportunities.”

SOS attempting repair of Ginger Lee House

by Alan Miller

Although Ginger Lee and Gary Rittenhouse moved their hair-care salons out of the landmark house at 917 S. Adams Street more than a decade ago, Save our Stories (SOS), a local historic preservation organization, has kept her name stuck to the property.

SOS acquired the Ginger Lee House in May, with an eye toward restoring the two-story brick house and an adjacent carriage house, which has an upstairs apartment. On Saturday, a dozen volunteers from

Haines resigns as head of Taylor

Taylor University Board of Trustees Chair Paige Cunningham, announced this week that Paul Lowell Haines, the president of the university, has resigned, effective August 15, 2019.

Haines sudden departure raised questions, but the press release the school put out said that Haines' resignation “was neither solicited nor encouraged by the Board of Trustees.”

“We are saddened by Dr. Haines' decision, but we are deeply grateful to him and to his wife Sherry for their personal commitment to the vision and historical, evangelical, orthodox Christian mission and purposes of Taylor University...” said Cunningham in the press release.

“My wife Sherry and I love Taylor and the Taylor community, as no other place and people,” the press release quoted Haines as saying. “We leave with a strong sense of accomplishment, knowing that remarkable progress has been made over the last three years, but also a clear awareness of God's new purpose and direction for our lives.”

Haines, a 1975 graduate of the university, returned to Taylor after a long career as a higher education lawyer with the international law firm of Faegre Baker Daniels. Prior to attending law school, he served at Taylor from 1977-1987, where he rose to the position of vice president for student development.

Save Our Stories began the process of pumping life into the property.

The SOS volunteers spent four hours on Saturday, primarily sweeping the interior of the house, trimming weeds and moving bathroom fixtures and a decade of other accumulated trash to a dumpster.

“The house was gifted to us by Stan and Lydia Wiseman, who own Brenda’s Dream B&B, which is adjacent to the YMCA on Branson Street,” said David Homer, president of SOS. “They had attempted to sell the Adams Street house, but it fell into disrepair and was no longer marketable.”

Homer and Paul Hayden, director of the Indiana Landmarks office in Wabash, approached the Wisemans in regards to acquiring the property. “We assured the Wisemans that we would begin restoration work, so we could get the property sold and back on the tax rolls,” Homer said. “We can see the house being suitable for professional offices.”

SOS has taken out a three-year loan from Indiana Landmarks, which primarily will be used for a new roof as well as for tuck pointing the brick on the main house. “If we have money left over, we will try to do something with the brick wall along the front of the house and also put a new roof on the carriage house,”

Homer said.

SOS also is trying to get the property listed on the National Register of Historic Homes, which would make the property eligible for other grants.

While some people see touches of Samuel Plato, an African-American architect who lived and worked in Marion in the early 1900s, the Adams Street property never has been confirmed as a Plato project. The Hostess House is Plato’s best-known design in Marion.

The longest-term tenants of the house are believed to be J. Wills Stephenson and his wife, Edith. The 1911 Marion City Directory lists Stephenson as the president of Delta Electric Co., People’s Drug Store, the Boston Store and Vice President of Indiana Truck Co.

Contrary to popular belief, however, the Stephensons were not the first occupants of the house. City directories indicate that Oscar E. and Maud J. Halderman built the house in about 1905. Various references identify Halderman as being a manager of the Marion Tribune, Indiana General Services and the Marion Street Railway Co.

The Halderman family organized Marion’s streetcar system in 1889.

For several years, the house was owned by St. Paul Catholic Church and served as a rectory for priests who served at the church and at St. Paul Parish School, both of which were located one block east of 917 S. Adams Street.

Five things to put aside

1 Peter 2:1-3

Have you ever stopped long enough and taken the time to think about what you believe? We are programmed in our own way, opinionated, and usually quick to share our beliefs. I realize that I am an unusual person, but it never bothers me what other people believe. I don’t feel threatened or offended when someone else has a mindset different from mine. However, I am always interested in how they have arrived at their beliefs.

As I read the Bible it causes me to ponder the things I really believe. It gives me insight to what I ought to believe. This process of establishing a belief system is not an easy one nor a quick one. It takes time to understand the principles of God’s Word and then to incorporate them into daily life.

Peter was an interesting Apostle who had a real zeal to serve His Lord. In his writing in 1 Peter, we see him giving us wisdom concerning suffering and glory. He talks in chapter one about our living hope, our inheritance, and the trials of our faith. The bottom line is “Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy” (1 Peter 1:16).

In chapter two Peter begins to give some necessary advice to every believer. He sets down the fundamental truths of the faith: “Wherefore, laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, As newborn babes, desire the pure milk of the word, that ye may grow by it: If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious” (1 Peter 2:1-3).

He recommends two things: mutual charity and excellence in the Word of God. He wants us to know that God’s Word is an incorruptible seed that abides forever. He gives necessary advice:

Lay aside evil

He begins by listing the sins that must be put off and thrown aside. The first thought mentioned is malice. This represents all sorts of wickedness. It represents an anger that rests in the bosom of a fool. This is a settled, overgrown anger that inflames one to design mischief. It delights in any mischief that burdens another.

JUST A THOUGHT

The second word is guile, which is deceit in words. It is falsehood, flattery, and delusion, a crafty imposition on another’s ignorance or weakness. The final motive is damage to another.

The third word is hypocrisies. These represent a false or fake piety to another in the act of friendship.

The fourth is all envies. These are to grieve at the good of another individual, to despise another’s abilities or prosperities, fame, or successful labor.

The fifth is evil speaking: To defame another in any type of act of backbiting or gossip.

This is quite a list in five simple points. There is no doubt we can all fall prey to these things if we don’t guard our hearts. It really doesn’t matter where we are in life, there is always room for improvement and we all need to be reminded of these things.

Next week we will continue these thoughts concerning the lessons we can learn from these principles, but this is plenty to digest for one week.

Tom

When did we get stuck trying to repeat Marion’s past?

It has been just about a year now since that Saturday morning when Greg Fiebig, an irritable sort with a vision of what Marion might be, laid out in a very few words a structure for how to get there.

Fiebig, the man who is Hoosier Shakes, the man who believes regular folks ought to make up their own minds about Shakespeare and a lot of other things, was listening, with varying degrees of patience, to a discussion of the future of the arts in Marion. Painting, theater, music, dance, video, all those pieces that come together to make our culture whatever it might be, for better or worse.

Dr. Fiebig is not a lifer in Marion. He is a transplanted Missourian who seems to have found a home at Indiana Wesleyan University and has pumped some life into the community conversation by creating a theatrical troupe which is about to launch its fourth summer theater season with two productions: “Othello” and “As You Like It.”

But I digress. On that Saturday morning, when the arts were being discussed, someone at the table made some reference to something that had come and gone from the Marion scene. Something which had once been good, but had either outlived its usefulness or no longer captured the public mind. I don’t recall what it was.

The person, the speaker, droned on about how we might recapture this lost glory, whatever it was, and was lamenting its loss.

Fiebig pulled himself up to the table, cleared his throat and said firmly and with unmistakable clarity: “I don’t want to hear another word about how Marion used to be...”

The message was unambiguous: Leave it and move on. We are not what we once were. Marion is not what it once was. Let us find ourselves and our place on a new landscape.

Neither better nor worse, but certainly different.

Two moments brought that to mind. One was considering Steve Wright and his commitment to restoring the Christmas parade to downtown Marion and trying to reinvigorate Marion’s moniker as “Christmas City USA” with the Walkway of Lights in Matter Park.

Wright, a well-meaning man and former city councilman whose job took him away from Marion for several years, has returned among us, and, as is his wont, he has quickly stepped back into the public arena.

We have, of course, the Didn’t we have that reputation, too?”

Then she poses the pay-off question: “When did we get stuck trying to repeat the fifties or the eighties and stop trying to be better at who we are now?”

Four Grant County teams use IWU Superhoops as tuneup

by Sean Douglas

Over the course of three days, more than 1,200 players on 128 teams from across the states of Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan took part in the annual IWU Superhoops Basketball Camp. Teams used the weekend to work on togetherness, while players focused on improving their individual skills.

The event made use of venues all over the city of Marion, as the Luckey Arena, Bill Green Arena, and McCulloch Middle School hosted games. Mississinewa High School and RJ Baskett Middle School in Gas City also hosted contests throughout the weekend.

Madison-Grant, Marion, Mississinewa, and Oak Hill all participated in the camp, honing their craft and continuing to make headway in their individual summer regimens.

Coming off of their regional championship a season ago, the Marion Giants have played a lot of basketball in the month of June, as their already talented roster looks to take the next step in their development.

“This has been a good, busy month for us,” Marion Head Coach James Blackmon said. “We’ve been to Indiana Team Camp. We’ve been to Miami of Ohio. Now, we are participating in this. We want to keep the guys busy. It’s a good measuring stick for us. We want [to help] the guys improve during the summer. That’s what makes our ball club better.”

While the Giants have a plethora of players returning, including Jalen Blackmon, Rasheed Jones, and JK Thomas, they also have guys like Jake McCarthy and Matthews Goolsby, among others, who are looking to make the varsity club this coming school year.

As the summer progresses, Blackmon and his staff will be looking for the best combinations for the Giants.

“We’ve got a lot of guys who played JV last year that will hopefully make the jump to varsity,” Blackmon said. “We are trying to figure it out, and the summer time is where you get it figured out.”

Along with working on their mental game and rebounding, the Madison-Grant Argyls have spent a good portion of their summer working on finding quality shots in their offensive sets, and Head Coach Brian Trout has been pleased with the results.

“That’s a big thing we’ve been working on—trying to get into the paint and create some stuff—whether it’s just a higher percentage shot or a [good look] for a teammate,” Trout said. “I thought we did a good job of that.”

While the Argyls have shown improvement on the offensive side of the ball, it’s been their play on the other end of the floor that has stood out all summer long.

“I have been pleased defensively all summer,” Trout said. “It’s been a huge focus for us. We are getting on help side a lot better. We are getting a lot of tips. We are getting a lot of steals. That makes easy baskets. If you can force those turnovers, it makes your transition offense look a lot better.”

Mississinewa, much like all the schools in Grant County, has taken advantage of the month of June, and Head Coach James Reed has been pleased with what he has seen. With a talented returning group, as well as a multitude of young players ready to make their mark, the Indians could be a really strong team in 2019-2020.

“This group just loves to play basketball,” Reed said. “I’m really encouraged and excited. They love to play defense, which I feel like is rare. And then we’ve got some young guys who are really producing well enough to push some of our older guys, which we haven't had in the past. We've been up and down, just like any June team would be, but I'm seeing some real grit."

Anthony Horton, Tai McClung, and Landen Swanner highlight a solid core, while younger players like Hayden Ulerick, Lucas Asbury, Keegan Williams and Bryce Luedtke all have the potential to crack the rotation this coming year.

For the Indians, their biggest focus has been on late-game situations. In several games last season the Indians faded in the fourth quarter, and Reed is looking to avoid that trend in his second year at the helm.

"Understanding situations has been our biggest key," Reed said. "We were really good through three quarters last season, and then that fourth quarter, sometimes, we would get out of what we do. Now, we've had a whole year of experience of understanding what we need to do to pull out those late games."

Oak Hill, much like Mississinewa, has an exciting, up-and-coming group of players that could form a solid nucleus in the years to come. Now, Head Coach Kevin Renbarger and the Golden Eagles are looking for more consistency.

"We've kind of come in and out in regards to games, and I think some of that is just maturity and growth and playing with each other," Renbarger said. "It's just a matter of bringing it all together. We've shown spurts of brilliance and we've shown spurts of immaturity. It's about trying to eliminate the immaturity and [amplify] the spurts of really good basketball."

Though no team is a finished product in the month of June, Renbarger has been pleased with his team's progression.

"We have played some pretty stiff competition this summer, and have played well," Renbarger said. "It's just a matter of bringing it all together and gelling a little bit. That's what we are here for."

All four Grant County teams performed well in the SuperHoops camp. Marion finished 8-2 and second in their eight-team division, Madison-Grant finished 7-2, Mississinewa finished 6-3, and Oak Hill finished as the Varsity D champions.

Clay target shooting still growing

Along with all of the accomplishments that Grant County high schools achieved in 2018-2019, Madison-Grant, Mississinewa, and Oak Hill also performed well in a sport that has begun to gain traction over the last few years: clay target shooting.

Despite a combination of just six years of experience, all three teams made remarkable strides, with two of them finishing in the top three in their respective conferences.

In 1A Conference 2, Mississinewa, in just its second year of existence, placed third with a team score of 1,255.50, which included a season-high 302 points in the second week of competition. Madison-Grant, in its inaugural season, took home fifth place with a score of 845.

Along with Mississinewa's third place team finish, two Lady Indians finished in the top 10. Mackenzie Bragg was fifth, with a season average of 18.10, while Katy Hosier was ninth with 16.40.

Harrison won Conference 2 with a total score of 1,841, while Central Noble came in second with 1,707 points.

In their third year of competition, the Oak Hill Golden Eagles put together a tremendous campaign, finishing in second place in Conference 3 with a score of 2,179.50--the highest of all three Grant County teams. Mater Dei was first in the conference with a score of 2,910.

Four Golden Eagles finished in the top 10. On the boys side, Samuel Boyer was seventh with an average of 23, while Braeden Loftin was 10th with 22.30. On the girls side, Lauren Belcher placed fourth with an average of 19.10, while Bethany Warren was sixth with 18.

Babe Ruth baseball once again a part of the Marion sports scene

by Sean Douglas

Summer baseball is back in the city of Marion.

When Marion Community Schools realized they wanted to go in a different direction with their summer baseball program, they approached Tino Mitchener, the father of Marion athlete AJ Mitchener, about setting up a new league, not only to bring baseball back to the community, but also to provide a stellar, developmental program to help boys and girls of all ages to improve their skills.

Mitchener, a longtime Marion resident, took up the opportunity, creating the Marion Babe Ruth League.

“I love baseball,” Mitchener said. “I played out here. My kids played out here. This place was the best part of my childhood. I told them I would absolutely help.”

With the generosity of the community and mul-iple Marion businesses behind him, Mitchener set up five divisions within the league with a total of 18 teams. The league features two softball teams--the first summer squads that Marion has had in 20 years--along with a brand new, four-team 9-10 division, which was created to help develop pitchers. The league also has a five-team coach’s pitch division, a six-team 11-12 division, and a seventh and eighth grade travel team that plays all over central Indiana.

In its first year of existence, the Marion Babe Ruth League has attracted families and baseball lovers alike to the facilities at Lincoln Field, but Mitchener points out that none of it would have been possible without the support of both the community as well as the many businesses that sponsored teams.

“We had a long road because, basically, we had to get all brand new equipment and everything, but the outpouring from the community and the businesses was very, very helpful,” Mitchener said. “We reached out to 80-100 businesses, and the feedback and the donations we got--we would not be here without that.

Two softball teams are a part of the newly revived Babe Ruth program in Marion this year.

“People don’t realize how expensive it is. Paying umpires, field maintenance, meeting certain health codes, everything costs a lot of money. We would not even be operating if it wasn’t for the community stepping forward. My thanks have to go out to them.”

Along with Mitchener, the league had an abundance of volunteers, including several Marion high school students, who each gave of their time to help everything run smoothly throughout the month of June.

“We’ve got a really good base of people,” Mitchener said. “My umpire crew is fairly young. I’ve got a lot of high school kids--varsity softball and baseball players--both present and former. They’re young, but they know the game. We’ve had several families step up and help us pick up trash and weeding--just those little things that accumulate that you don’t think about.”

While the Marion Babe Ruth League has enjoyed a tremendous first summer, Mitchener has plans to expand it, including adding teams to the softball and the 9-10 division. Along with that, he hopes that people talking about the league will help to recruit new prospects in subsequent years.

“Word of mouth [is important,]” Mitchener said. “Social media. Getting more people signed up. People that might have been on the fence about coming back this year that didn’t come back, we want to get those people back. And we [want] to get more help, more volunteers. Anybody that wants to pick up a rake or run a mower, we need those kinds of things.”

Still, after year one, Mitchener could not have been more proud with the way things went.

“I’m extremely happy with where we are at,” Mitchener concluded. “We started two brand new leagues that we haven’t had for decades. Considering where we are at, with the excitement of the games... I’m very, very happy.”
