County remembers Dean legend

by Sean Douglas

The story of James Dean is a tragic one, as a fatal car accident in 1955 cut short his potentially successful acting career. For one weekend each September thousands of people from Grant County, surrounding areas, and the world gather in Dean's hometown of Fairmount celebrating the "King of Cool."

The 44th annual James Dean Day Festival offered attendees a glimpse back in time to the era of doo-wop music, greasy hair, and of course, classic cars. Over the course of the five-day event, all sorts of entertainment—carnival rides, a parade, dances, a James Dean look-alike contest, the James Dean Museum, screenings of Dean's film, and much more—bring people together from all walks of life to share in an unforgettable and unique experience.

But, arguably, the event's biggest draw is its car show.

While strolling Playacres Park, patrons had the opportunity to time-travel through the decades. Several 1920s Ford Model Ts were on display, as well as several late '40s-early '50s model Mercurys, a plethora of Mustangs from the '60s, and Dean's own red 1949 Ford sedan, which he drove to school while living in Fairmount, as well as to and from California and New York.

All in all, there were enough automobiles to go around to interest the casual observer to the most fanatical of car lovers.

Bill Pavey, a resident of Kokomo, has been coming to the James Dean Day Festival ever since the inaugural event in 1975. He used to bring a 1932 Ford to show back in the early years, but has shown either 1955 or 1957 Chevys in the last few Septembers. This year, he proudly showed off a 1956 Chevy BelAir, along with a Camaro and a Nova. "I just enjoy the car shows," Pavey said. "I enjoy

MLK wall mural invites creativity, social change

The walls of a venerable warehouse at 12th and S. Branson Streets in Marion, now housing Foliag Farms' hydroponic garden, have become a giant canvas for the expression and creation of visual stories. In a ceremony Thursday, youngsters were given spray paint and access to the west wall of the building, while more experienced artists began applying a large portrait of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and the text of his "I Have a Dream"

TRIBUTE

by Alan Miller

If the Wesleyan Church endorsed the practice of bestowing sainthood, Mildred Jane Jacobs Troyer likely would have become the patron saint of Indiana Wesleyan University. Instead, the woman known simply as Millie to generations of IWU students, staff and alumni, was honored with a title that she dearly treasured: "Official Cheerleader" of the University.

Millie Troyer, who died Wednesday at 95, was—and always will be—IWU's cheerleader laureate. Although her special passion was athletics, Millie treasured everything and everyone who bore even the slightest hint of an IWU connection.

Troyer, a Fort Wayne native, first came to IWU, then known as Marion College, as a student and graduated in 1948. She later would add a couple of firsts to her resume: the first Marion College alumni director and the first women's athletic director, which, in those days, was an intramural program.

In 1972, after serving as alumni director for nine years, Millie left campus and moved to a 100-acre campus on an island in Ontario, Canada, that she had bought a

Four principles to help us rise above mediocrity

It is always my prayer that I live my life in such a way that it will glorify God. I don't want to do this to draw attention to me, but rather to the Lord. The things we do today will most likely never be remembered by the next generation. Solomon gives us insight into this in the Book of Ecclesiastes. I have never claimed to be normal and I have never wanted to be just average. Over the course of my life it has been my goal to do all I can, always striving for the best I can do. Now, as I tell you this, I don't believe that I am the best at anything I attempt. Considering this, you might be wondering, why try to be best if you never attain it? The answer is simple: by striving to be the best, it helps us to be better than we were, and most of the time, much better.

The Scripture encourages us to live our lives in such a way that it really raises the standard. Ephesians 5:15-20 teaches us how to live above the norm of life. If you could do better, wouldn't you want to? It seems that a lot of people are satisfied with mediocrity and never want to do, or be, a better person. Paul's writing to the church at Ephesus was a masterpiece of how one learns to obtain heavenly living. He is talking about a type of utopia that is actually attainable. A Spirit-filled, Spirit-controlled life that will bring much peace, joy, and contentment.

There are four principles given in Ephesians 5:15-20 that teach us how to rise above mediocrity:

1. Purity—"See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but wise" (verse 15). This is an interesting concept that we must all understand. We are all to walk upright. Just as one would walk with good physical posture, God says we must spiritually walk with good posture. It refers to walking in such a manner that you realize that everybody is watching you and observing how you conduct your life. Our walk should be a wise and thoughtful walk. It is important what others say about us. We know from verse 16 that the times are evil. Therefore, we must make the most of our lives. The next time you leave home, remember, somebody is watching you.

2. Prayer—Nothing in our lives should ever be attempted without prayer. I must seek my Heavenly Father for wisdom. To invest my time wisely. The clock of life is ticking, and it doesn't wait for anyone. We all understand the many demands that are placed on all of us by the world itself as well as from others. Considering the many things we face on a daily basis, how can we do anything without praying first?

3. Principles of the Word (The Bible)—"Wherefore, be ye

JUST A THOUGHT

not unwise but understanding what the will of the Lord is" (verse 17). How can I do what the Lord wants me to do if I don't have a basic understanding of the Bible? God is not asking us all to be theologians, but He does want us to read His Word.

4. Praise—This praise should come from three forms. First of all, I need to praise God for all of the things He has done for me in the past. Secondly, I need to praise Him for all that He is doing for me today. Thirdly, I must praise Him for what He is going to do for me in the future. God has been busy in our lives in the past. He is now busy working us through every little thing that comes our way. Now, tomorrow is another story. He says in John 14 that He is preparing a place for each of us who have accepted Jesus Christ as Savior. Sounds to me like He is an Awesome God!

Country music gets the Ken Burns treatment

It was at the restaurant dinner table the other night, a couple of days before the conclusion of Ken Burns' monumental public television project on the roots of country music in America.

The folks at the table were more philharmonic than folk, more opera than Opry. Or so I thought. And discussion got around to wrapping up dinner soon. "We want to get home to watch Ken Burns. He's supposed to talk about Loretta Lynn tonight."

Astounded, but I shouldn't have been, either by their interest or the magnetism of the boyish-looking genius with the Beatle mop haircut.

To whatever topic Ken Burns turns his attention, it becomes water cooler—and dinner table—talk for quite a while. Recall his exploration of the Civil War? People who didn't know Antietam from Anaheim were debating Gen. Burnside at the bridge. Kindly old Shelby Foote became a slow talking folk hero of sorts. Then came baseball, and jazz, and World War II and Vietnam.

Now it is country music in America, and it is glorious. I'll grant you this: Either you like country music or you don't. Not much in the middle. Hank Williams is the hillbilly Shakespeare, as Burns called him, or he is unbearable with that nasal twang. No middle ground. Same with Willie and Waylon and Merle and Johnny and Kris, and I just made my point. If you are a fan, well then, you know who Willie and Waylon and Merle and Johnny and Kris are. No surname needed; not Nelson or Jennings or Haggard or Cash or Kristofferson. If you are not, well I probably shall not bring you to the front to repent.

But grant me this: They are one of us, each in his or her own way. Loretta Lynn is one of us. Born and reared in Pike County, Kentucky, just down the road from the great migration from Johnson County to Grant County and Wabash County to work at General Tire back in the post-war years. Loretta was a Webb, sister of Brenda and Jay Lee and Peggy Sue and all the others who went to Wabash High School. Their widowed mother later married Tommy Butcher and lived out her life in Wabash. Brenda went on to become Crystal Gayle—she of "Don't it Make My Brown Eyes Blue," which you certainly heard somewhere. She's still married to Bill Gatzimos from Wabash after 48 years. She's one of us; she's Brenda Gatzimos.

None was more one of us than George Riddle. Born and reared right here in Marion, northeast Marion, he came just this close to being a star. Right on the edge. Ran with the big dogs, but just never quite made it. Wrote dozens of songs. One—"She's Lonesome Again"—was recorded by Ray Charles, for godssake! And the other night, right there in Ken Burns' show, there he was. There was George standing on stage right beside The Possum, George Jones. They, the two Georges, were close for years. Riddle played guitar for Jones. They traveled together. Probably drank a few together. One George recorded the songs the other George wrote. Both are gone now. Our George died back in 2014 after wrestling with cancer.

You must permit me a couple of personal notes here. A few years before he departed, George and I talked about his youth. "You wrote a story about me when I opened for Tex Ritter up at the Honeywell Center in Wabash 50 years ago," he said.

I denied it. "No George. I wrote about Tex and his water glass of Jack Daniels back stage, but I don't think I wrote about you." "Yes you did. I can prove it." Next time I saw him he pulled out a faded newspaper page. Yup. There it was. Picture and story about George, with my byline at the top.

Then there was the time that Waylon Jennings came to town. He sang in the gymnasium of what is now the Grant County Family YMCA. It was the Memorial Coliseum then. I'd shoved my way to the front, camera in hand, just as he was winding up "Rainy Day Woman." Song ended. He went silent, stared at me and said for all the world to hear: "Go ahead and take it, this is as good as I get."

Then there were a few minutes with Willie Nelson in Fort Wayne. I'd been photographing him from a safe distance as he talked with fans. As they departed, he motioned me over, stuck out his hand to shake, and said in that quiet, Willie way: "And your name would be what, sir?"

I honest-to-god could not remember my own name. I've got a picture of that: Me and Willie, right there.

A MOMENT

Dayton Duncan, who wrote for Ken Burns, wrapped the whole thing up and put a bow on it the other night. County music, he said, is "a complicated chorus of American voices joining together to tell a complicated American story."

Indeed it is, and it is our story, yours and mine.

I am a huge fan of street art and from my time in Miami I know it can be a real bridge builder on many social issues.

That happened Thursday. Youngsters from the surrounding area and from other neighborhoods gathered to tell their stories in paint decade earlier. She lived on St. Joseph Island for the next 30 years, directing camps throughout Ontario and making frequent trips back to Marion to help out with campus activities.

On May 19, 1978, five days after her 52nd birthday, Millie Jacobs married Richard Troyer—appropriately, on the IWU campus and on graduation day. Dick Troyer was a retired postmaster in northern Indiana, and the two families had known each other for years.

After their marriage, Dick and Millie returned to Canada where they developed the 100 acres into what was officially called All Tribes Christian Camp, but was better known as IWU’s Canadian Campus. In the 1980s, the Troyers attempted to deed the camp to IWU, but were unable to overcome international legal hurdles.

Dick Troyer died in 1999, and Millie returned to Marion two years later. For the past 18 years, she has lived in a University-owned house on the north side of campus. An IWU flag flies from the front of the house, beside a 30-foot-long banner proclaiming, “Welcome IWU Students.”

For the past two decades, Millie has kept busy volunteering in the athletic department, selling tickets, staffing concession stands or doing whatever else needed to be done. “I can’t tell you what it does to me just to be around the kids,” she said in an interview in 2003. “I see my role as being a helper and an encourager.”

Dr. Mike Fratzke said he met Millie shortly after he came to IWU in 1984 to serve as athletic director. Their relationship grew when Millie returned to campus in 2001. “She always wanted to be involved, especially in the athletic department, and she contributed in so many ways. She had a lot of good ideas,” Fratzke said. “Initially, we had a small office for her in the athletic department, but as our programs grew we needed the space. Millie didn’t care because she always was on the go.”

In addition to her degree from IWU, Millie later earned a master’s degree from Indiana University. She was an ordained minister in both the Free Methodist and Wesleyan churches.

Of all the well-deserved honors she received, perhaps none was more pleasing or more enduring than a ceremony at Homecoming 2011 when the IWU field house

Wildcats take first-ever night game; Indians, Panthers, Giants win

IWU freshman running back Jesse Deglow committed a cardinal sin in the first quarter of Friday’s contest against Olivet Nazarene University: fumbling the ball inside the red zone. That turnover led to the Tigers’ second touchdown of the game, putting the Wildcats in an early hole for the second time in two weeks.

But, in a crucial, late-game situation, Deglow redeemed himself. With the Wildcats clinging to a four-point lead, they faced a third-and-two from their own 49-yard line, needing a first down to put the game away. Deglow’s number was called and he delivered, securing a 28-24 triumph in IWU’s first-ever night game at Wildcat Stadium on Saturday evening.

Olivet Nazarene scored on its first two possessions to take a 14-0 lead, but the Wildcats’ defense stiffened, allowing just 10 points the rest of the contest.

The Wildcats tied the game on their first drive of the second half, and scored again on their following series. The Tigers tied it up early in the fourth quarter on a one-yard touchdown run from Jared Honey, but just four plays later, Phillips recorded the Wildcats’ longest run of the night, scampering 49 yards, untouched, to the end zone, giving IWU the lead back for good.

That’s when Deglow came through. Needing just two yards on the ninth play of the drive, Deglow picked up eight, rewarding his coaches’ faith in him by delivering the biggest play of the game. “It meant everything to me,” Deglow said. “After I [fumbled,] there was no negativity at all. All of my teammates were behind me. All of my coaches were behind me. I went and did what I said I would do.”

Eastbrook routs Frankton

The Panthers played well in all phases, and secured their fourth straight victory with a 68-14 rout of the Frankton Eagles. Eastbrook racked up 332 rushing yards on just 28 carries. Zeke Binkerd finished with 79 rushing yards and two touchdowns on just two carries, while Wyatt Stephenson scored three touchdowns on five carries. Raef Biddle and Dylan Bragg also found the end zone for the Panthers. Bragg only attempted three passes, but completed all three of them, which included a 41-yard touchdown pass to tight end Alex Baker.

Argylls fall to 0-6

After a close first quarter on Friday night, the Madison-Grant Argylls were held off the scoreboard the rest of the way, as the Blackford Bruins scored 15 unanswered points in a 28-6 victory. Madison-Grant trailed just 13-6 after the first quarter, but the Bruins scored eight points in the second and seven insurance points in the fourth to secure the triumph.

Marion crushes Berries

Behind seven combined touchdowns from JK Thomas and Khalid Stamps and another stout defensive effort, Marion improved to 4-0 in the conference and won their fourth contest in a row, defeating the Logansport Berries 51-0.

The Giants compiled over 450 yards of offense, including over 350 on the ground, while holding the Berries to under 200 yards. Thomas was the star of the show, scoring four touchdowns – two on the ground, one through the air, and the other on a punt return.

Fellow running back Khalid Stamps, who continues to flourish as the team’s No. 1 running back, was equally as impressive, finishing with 165 yards and three touchdowns on 12 carries. At quarterback, Taylor and Cain Richardson threw a combined 8-for-8 for 141 yards and a touchdown.

Is the NCAA crumbling?

The world of NCAA sports could be crumbling right in front of our faces. First, the talk of allowing players to go right from high school into the NBA.

Now, in California, a state law allowing student athletes to be paid while in school for advertisements in which they perform. For instance, here's the quarterback of UCLA telling you to drive a car offered by car dealer XYZ.

The NCAA is saying we will see about this, and it may all get overturned.

Or, the NCAA may say, go ahead and take the payments for the ads but you won't ever play in one of our tourneys.

Just think: A rich car dealer in California offers five recruits millions of dollars to do ads for his store. They get the money. UCLA gets the players—and dominates college basketball like they used to.

We have to keep a distance between college and pro sports, or it will all become a bidding war.

There was talk of the NCAA going back to the old rules, and the pro leagues should buy in. Either you go straight to the pros out of high school or you can't play pro sports for four years, while getting your degree.

If this continues, it could very well be the end of college sports as we know them today.

Makes you enjoy local high school sports doesn't it?
