The power of a good life

By Rev. Tom Mansbarger

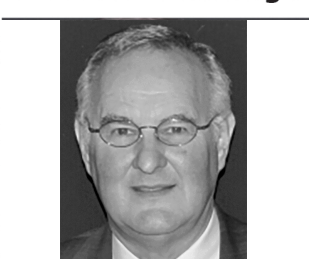

Over the years of my Christian life I have had favorite Books of the Bible, favorite chapters, special verses, and biblical characters I like to study. For years David was my favorite character, but I have made a change. Several years ago I did a character study on the life of Moses, and everything changed. His life has to be one of the most amazing stories I have ever read.

As we shared in a previous article, Moses was born to Jewish parents who would not obey the Pharaoh's decree to kill all the male newborn Jewish children. They hid him for three months before their ultimate act of faith took place. They put him in a basket at the river's shore and pushed him out into the current with only the hope and faith that God would guide the basket. And He did! Even though Pharaoh's daughter had Jochebed (Moses' mother) nurse him and raise him, he was ultimately turned over to her.

Moses had the privilege of being raised under the influence of the Pharaoh. He was provided with the best education available. He grew up with the finest of everything Egypt had to offer. Now, at the age of 40, he is an Egyptian prince. He was the uncrowned King of Egypt, heir to the throne. He had the experience of growing up with the most elite people of Egypt. He had no trouble fitting in because that was the way he was raised. Now, we must realize, if Moses had been raised by his biological parents, he wouldn't have been privileged to the lifestyle he was now accustomed to.

At this point in his life there was nothing to stop him from enjoying the pomp and pleasure at his disposal. It could be said that Moses was at the pinnacle of life and nothing would get in the way.

Even though there are times when we look at others and it appears they have everything this world has to offer, wisdom tells us that is hardly the case. Outward appearances are seldom what they seem to be. So it was with Moses. At the age of 40 Moses is experiencing finer things in life, but there is something brewing inside of him. He is not an Egyptian and knows deep down who he really belongs to. He would make regular trips out to see what was going on in the lives of the Hebrew children. Something kept drawing him back.

Moses was placed in a situation where he was faced with a big decision. He saw an Egyptian soldier beating a Jew, something I am sure he saw often. At this point, he couldn't take any more, he stepped in and killed the soldier. This choice immediately had a life-changing effect on him. Moses possessed godly traits, and he had always been a law abiding citizen. One of the reasons he killed the soldier was that he never forgot where he came from. He was an Egyptian by all outward appearances, but he was all Jew on the inside. The nurturing his mother gave him as a small child was engrained into his innermost being. This is a principle that we all could learn, the early years of child-rearing will last a lifetime.

I hope you have enjoyed the thoughts of Moses' life thus far. We will continue next week in part 2.
